U. S. and Britain Ready to Start Huge Warships

Vessels of 45,000 Tons May Be Announced This Week.

France Will Await Europe's Reaction

Defense Progress.

Plans to build warships above the 35,000-ton limit of the 1936 London Naval Treaty will be announced this week by the United States and Great Britain, it is reported.

The House passed a $448,116,284 appropriation bill to run the Army in 1939.—Page 2.

Action This Week.

The United States and Great Britain are expected to announce this week their plans to build monster warships, for other than the present 35,000-ton limit, informed sources said last night.

The vast vessels, mightier than anything now afloat, and mounting guns larger than any ship ever has fired, are to be constructed after the two nations have invoked the escalator clause of the 1936 London Naval Treaty, it was learned.

That clause permits signatories of the treaty to build over the 35,000-ton limit if any other nation builds beyond it.

France to Wait.

Japan, not a signatory of that treaty, refused on February 12 to deny or confirm reports that the new Nipponese armada includes craft of 43,500 tons under construction.

France, it was indicated in an Associated Press dispatch from London, will not join Great Britain and the United States in the step until she ascertains the reactions of Italy, Germany and Russia to the Anglo-American announcement.

A meeting of American, British and French naval experts in London yesterday discussed the step, sources here and abroad said, and reached the decision, approved here, to step up the naval race.

Up to 45,000 Tons.

Even agreement on terms of the notes to be exchanged was reached, it was revealed.

The new superdreadnaught limit may go as high as 45,000 tons, with guns up to 18 inches, it was indicated.

No final decision, however, is expected until the three-month consultative period prescribed in the treaty has elapsed.

Such a period also would allow Navy Department draftsmen to polish up final details of plans already almost complete for construction of craft up to 45,000 tons.

Three Big Ships Planned.

Informed Navy officials said:

"It's our business to be prepared for changes in long-range building programs as well as to meet threats to national security with forces already afloat."

The start will be made with the three battleships asked by President Roosevelt in his 20 per cent naval expansion program, which has passed the House and now is before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, it was believed.

Work is too far advanced on the 35,000-ton $64,000,000 sister ships, the

What Is the Background of the Mexican Oil Crisis?

Back in 1927, the Mexican government threatened the oil companies. Has Mexico now bitten off more than it can chew in seizing these oil companies—estimated to be worth $400,000,000? What is the background of this expropriation? Today, read Jeffrey Paul's special article from Mexico—

Tonsilitis Fells 500 On U. S. S. Lexington

Honolulu, March 29 (AP).—More than 500 officers and men of the aircraft carrier Lexington were stricken today with a throat disorder, described as tonsilitis, and the gigantic vessel was forced to withdraw from war maneuvers. The craft carries a crew of 1,800.

Navy officers reported the epidemic had subsided from its peak of several days ago. Only seven new cases were reported yesterday. The officers said they expected the Lexington to take her place with the fleet again before finish of the maneuvers. They said the source of the infection had not been discovered.

Meanwhile, 100 planes aboard the carrier remained unmanned and useless to the "Blue" Fleet—the make-believe enemy force in the war games.

By James D. Secrest.

A year's trial of parking meters in the National Capital was assured yesterday when the House, after thrice blocking the authorization, adopted a modified Senate amendment to the District supply bill by a vote of 214 to 119.

The Senate concurred in the revision of its own amendment, made in conference, and the bill carrying $47,255,155 in appropriations to operate the District government during the next fiscal year was sent to the White House for the President's signature.

The modified amendment restricts the parking-meter experiment to 4 blocks or 16 street sections in locations to be decided by the Commissioners. Further legislation will be necessary to make the parking meters permanent or to permit their expansion beyond four blocks.

The parking-meter amendment had delayed passage of the bill for more than a week.

Almost simultaneously with the final legislative action on the District supply bill, the House subcommittee on fiscal relations concluded two months' study of the local revenue problem by reporting a bill to the full District Committee that will raise more than $5,000,000 to offset a deficit estimated at $3,700,000.

Pendergast Men Sweeping Ticket At Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo., March 29 (U.P.).—The T. J. Pendergast Democratic machine piled up a substantial lead tonight in the municipal election, first since the start of the famous vote fraud trials.

In the race for mayor, returns from 359 precincts out of 460, gave incumbent Bryce B. Smith, 90,568; coalition candidate Frederick E. Whitten 54,496.

In only one race out of the eight for the city council was the machine losing.

Damage Suit Defeated By James Roosevelt

New York, March 29 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President, today won a $6,000 negligence suit brought by Police Sergt. William Seubert and his wife, Anna.

Mrs. Seubert testified she was injured when Roosevelt's automobile, driven by a chauffeur, John J. Duggan, struck her car.

The Pincers Close.

By the United Press.

With the Insurgents, Mequinenza, Spain, March 29.—Enormous columns of smoke, visible for 30 miles, arose tonight from the fortified city of Lerida as three insurgent columns closed in on the Catalonian stronghold, headquarters of Loyalist Gen. Sebastian Pozas.

Gen. Franco's field headquarters, repudiating earlier insurgent radio reports that Lerida had fallen, said Gen. Juan Yague's African Moors were within 8 miles of the city.

Two Hospitals Bombed.

The smoke above the 2,200-year-old city indicated the Loyalists were setting fire to gasoline storage tanks, insurgents said.

The Loyalist war office at Barcelona said ten coastal towns, including Castellon and Tarragona, had been bombed in the last 24 hours, with heavy casualties. Four German Junker planes from Mallorca attacked the Provincial Hospital at Castellon, shattering wards filled with children; destroyed another hospital at the Provincial Institute of Hygiene, and demolished 70 houses.

Lerida Panic Rising.

(The Loyalists also asserted the insurgent drive into Catalonia had been stopped and that Loyalist troops had begun a counter-offensive southwest of Teruel.)

Civilian refugees reported increasing panic in Lerida and said most of the noncombatants had evacuated it on orders of the Loyalist government in Barcelona, 84 miles to the east.

Insurgent aviators reported white flags of surrender flying from hundreds of house tops in the city.

Reports reached the insurgents that Gen. Pozas had been relieved of his command for failing to stem Franco's drive to the sea.

Dynamiters in Action.

As Yague drove his Moroccans upon Lerida along the broad Saragossa-Lerida-Barcelona highway against strong resistance by fierce Asturian "dynamiters," another insurgent force on the south moved across the Cinca River and prepared to join Yague.

The Asturians, lighting dynamite fuses and hurling the explosives with the sureness of baseball pitchers, were said to have been suicidal in their resistance. They blew up bridges and culverts along the highway and along the Serge River to the southwest.

Mexico Congress Call Follows Daniels Visit

Official Protest on Oil Seizure Reported But State Department, Gravely Concerned, Refuses Comment; Silver Price Cut Again.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Grave concern over friction between this country and Mexico created by that government's expropriation of the $400,000,000 property of American oil companies yesterday was indicated at the State Department by adoption of a new tone of caution and reluctance in discussing the matter.

Pending further study of a weighty brief left by spokesmen for the oil companies, department attaches declined to discuss this Government's attitude. Even such elementary questions as whether American Ambassador Josephus Daniels had protested or made representations to the Mexican government were left unanswered.

The Associated Press in a dispatch from Mexico City reported that Daniels had vigorously protested seizure of the oil properties. At first the department declined all comment on this report but subsequently asserted a formal statement made by the Ambassador covered the subject. This statement was issued after Secretary of State Cordell Hull conferred on the telephone with Daniels.

A later dispatch stated that soon after Daniels' statement President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico called for an "extraordinary and urgent" session of the Mexican congress. An internal loan of 100,000,000 pesos (about $20,000,000) to repay oil companies whose properties were expropriated will be considered, it was reported.

Nazis Claim Fear Of Helium in War Is 'Pure Nonsense'

Berlin, March 29 (AP).—Dirigibles have ceased to be useful in war, a source close to the government said today, adding that any suggestion helium imported from the United States might be used for war purposes is "pure nonsense."

German aviation experts said four factors virtually forbid the use of dirigibles in the next war: Low speed, high cost, bulkiness and the necessity of maintaining large air and ground crews.

Senate Passes Bill Tightening 'Numbers' Law

The Senate yesterday approved House amendments to the "numbers" bill, sending the legislation to the White House, as a sub-committee of the House District Committee concluded hearings on the District race track bill.

Upon motion of Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, the Senate accepted a change in language of the bill which it passed a year ago. The principal revision is that possession of copies or records of policy numbers, rather than the original, makes the holder subject to prosecution.

Passage of the bill strengthening the local gambling laws culminates a campaign that began in the special House investigation of crime in the District in 1935.

With the hearing of opponents of the District race track bill, Chairman McGehee, of the judiciary subcommittee, said he will call an executive meeting later in the week to decide whether to report the

Nazi Plane Breaks Sea Flight Record

Sao Salvador, Brazil, March 29 (AP).—The long-distance flight record for seaplanes was broken today by H. W. Von Engel, German commercial pilot.

He landed at Caravellas, Brazil, after a 5,433-mile hop from Southampton, England, in 43 hours and 5 minutes.

Hoover Back, Predicts Peace; Laden With Medals, Degrees

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—Former President Herbert Hoover came home from Europe today with four new honorary degrees, 16 medals and the conviction that a general war is not imminent in Europe.

Streets were named for Hoover in Brussels, Lille, Valenciennes and Prague; a new planet discovered by the Brussels astronomical observatory named Herberta, and a second planet discovered by the Vienna astronomical observatory called Hoovera.

Degrees, medals and the conviction—a conviction persisting in spite of the extensive military preparations he witnessed—were gathered in a two-month tour of 14 countries. It was his first trip abroad in 19 years, and, smiling quietly, he confessed he had found the continent "changed."

Regarding his European conclusions, he said:

"The first and outstanding change I saw was the revolution from democracies into totalitarian or authoritarian governments or to some degree of dictatorship.

"The second outstanding fact is armament. Every government in Europe is engaged in extending its military forces, and in five years' time expenditures on armament and military forces have increased from $4,000,000,000 a year to $8,000,000,000.

"The next factor is the fundamental degeneration in the economic situation in Europe, at least in government finances and barriers to trade. Outside of one or two

RFC Funds for Business.

By Sidney Olson.

A bill centralizing the lending powers of the New Deal in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and making available about $1,500,000,000 of unused RFC funds to all types of business was reported favorably by the Senate Banking Committee yesterday.

The measure, of particular political significance in that it places in the big-fingered hands of RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones a huge chunk of the Administration's total spending power, shot through the committee in jigtime, over the opposition of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Strikes at Ickes.

Ickes, voicing views often attributed to left-wing New Deal advisers, urged the committee informally to amend the bill to permit the Public Works Administration to resume loans and grants to States and municipalities.

Immediately the "Old Dominion Bantam," Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, author of the measure (which he dropped inconspicuously in the Senate hopper late last week) took sharp issue with the Interior head. He sniped at Ickes:

"There are some communities silly enough to suppose the Treasury gets money out of the air, but we don't have to encourage them."

Treated With Deference.

Ickes said quietly: "Congress handed me the power, Senator. I didn't draft the law. I just carried it out."

Glass heckled him further: "Well, maybe I'm not blaming you, but I'm blaming the senseless people who think they can get something for nothing. The local taxpayer pays for it in the end, doesn't he?"

The huge, genial Jones, generally considered to be the 1940 hope of the conservative Democrats, was treated with deference sharply contrasting with Ickes' reception.

Jones later appeared before the House Banking Committee, where Chairman Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, has an identical

London, March 29 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax told the Lords today that Britain hopes to counter Adolf Hitler's expansion by an agreement with Italy.

The Archbishop of Canterbury declared he was convinced collective security was impossible. He praised Prime Minister Chamberlain's foreign policy and virtually justified Adolf Hitler's annexation of Austria.

G. A. O. Exempt In House Bill on Reorganization

Can't Buy the Senate, Roosevelt Proclaims

Warm Springs, Ga., March 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt bitterly condemned an unnamed source of opposition to his Government reorganization bill today, asserting Senate passage of the measure proved that body "cannot be purchased by organized telegrams based on direct misrepresentation."

He did not name the organized opposition, but showed plainly his elation over the Senate's action.

He said as soon as he received additional opinions on his special committee's report recommending a solution of the railroad problem he would prepare a message to Congress proposing legislative remedies.

He asserted quick action was essential and that further investigation would be unnecessary.

4 Measures Paralleling Senate Bill to Be Pooled Today.

Proponents Seek Vote by Saturday

Action in the House.

The Senate resolution for a joint Congressional investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority was favorably reported by the House Rules Committee.—Page 2.

Vote to Be Rushed.

By Robert C. Albright.

The House version of the Administration's Government reorganization bill was groomed yesterday for a muddy track through the House before a repetition of last week's heavy shower of telegraphic protests can further slow passage.

Four House bills largely paralleling the single omnibus Senate measure today will be pooled by the special House Reorganization Committee and reported to the House for opening debate tomorrow.

See Action by Saturday.

Leaders will drive for action by Saturday in an effort to substitute the combined House bill for the Senate carry-all and send both to conference next week. Opposition forces are concentrating on thorough-going modification, and hope to forestall a final vote until next week.

At the head of the Democratic opposition was Representative Arthur P. Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, who charged the Administration "will accept any bill from the House, in order to get it in conference, where the Senate provisions will be agreed to."

O'Connor to Lead Fight.

Dominant roles in opposing the measure also will be taken by Chairman John J. O'Connor of the House Rules Committee and by Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, who recently debated the issue with James Roosevelt, son of the President.

At least one major feature of the reorganization program, civil service reform, appeared in serious danger in the House, and heavy fire was directed at such other provisions as revamping of the general accounting system, and establishment of a new Department of Welfare.

Reorganization powers for the President, which nearly proved the nemesis of the bill in the Senate, already have been approved once by the House. They must be run through the gauntlet again in the new House omnibus bill.

G. A. O. Is Exempted.

But the House merger provisions, sponsored by Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, in their present form specifically exempt the General Accounting Office from abolition or transfer, and fail to provide for the National Resources Planning Board, set up under the Senate bill.

Another outstanding departure from the Senate proposals will be provided in the auditing title of the bill. The House measure continues the Comptroller General's Office, makes him subject to removal by the President and provides for a new Auditor General responsible to Congress. The Senate bill abolishes the Comptroller General and the General Accounting Office, but creates an Auditor General with powers of post-audit.

Two of the four pending House reorganization bills now carry the

Senators Move To Free Credit Of 2-4 Billions

Finance Committee Acts on Holding Company Tax Provisions.

The Senate Finance Committee last night moved to loosen between $2,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000 in credit frozen in personal holding companies by modifying corporate dissolution tax provisions, and then called another meeting for today to extend relief to liquidating utility holding concerns.

It was the committee's first night meeting of the year, and conclusive action was taken on a dozen features of the pending bill, ranging from excise levies to income-tax publicity. Chairman Pat Harrison was driving for a final vote on the bill today in an effort to rush the business relief measure to the floor.

Over-riding Administration opposition, the committee sustained House bill provisions modifying the present income-tax publicity law. Publication only of corporate salaries in excess of $75,000 was sanctioned. The present law requires publicity of salaries in excess of $15,000, and the President sought continuation of the law.

Pork Taxes Rejected.

But the Administration won a victory when the committee voted 17 to 4 to reject excise taxes on imported pork voted by the House. Similarly, the committee refused to impose excises on imported canned beef by a 13-to-8 vote, and rejected excises on imported canned ham, 14 to 7.

House repeal of nuisance taxes on furs, phonographs, sporting goods and cameras was approved by the Senate group, but the committee refused to eliminate the chewing gum tax, estimated to yield only $900,000 a year. House refusal to modify cosmetics levies was sustained in another vote.

Given Another Year.

But the committee again departed from the House bill to vote repeal of the excise tax on brewers' wort and malt syrup, which would have yielded only $600,000 next year. Harrison said the total excise tax changes would result in a loss to the Treasury of less than the $2,000,000 estimated loss from House nuisance tax provisions.

The amendment designed to encourage liquidation of personal

Banks of Tidal Basin Chosen As Jefferson Memorial Site

A Thomas Jefferson Memorial that follows the original design of the late John Russell Pope on a slightly smaller scale, but which is slated to be located on the banks of the Tidal Basin rather than over the basin, was approved yesterday by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission after several weeks of deliberations.

While Representative Boylan (Democrat), of New York, said the location on the southeast side of the Tidal Basin would not necessitate the destruction of any cherry trees, architectural drawings disclose that the basin's edge in front of the memorial would be clear of all trees.

No estimate of the cost of the memorial was made in a statement regarding the project, but members indicated the plan would require the full $3,000,000 authorized despite the simplification of plans.

No money will be available for the construction, however, until the Budget Bureau, with the President's approval, sends up a deficiency estimate or the House Appropriations Committee on its own initiative makes an appropriation.

Boylan, after a call at the White House last week, indicated the revised plan had the approval of the President.

The design and location of the memorial, Boylan said, are in conformity with the general plan of Washington.

Banks Furnished Data on $200,000,000 Insured Mortgage Program.

Terms under which the National Mortgage Association of Washington, recently established by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will advance funds to promote housing construction were announced yesterday in a letter from Chairman Jesse Jones of the latter agency to Stewart MacDonald, Federal housing administrator.

MacDonald sent the information to 10,000 banks, buildings, savings and loan associations, mortgage companies and other institutions that have qualified as approved mortgagees to make and service loans insured by the FHA.

The National Mortgage Association of Washington was set up with a capital of $10,000,000 supplied by the RFC. It has power to borrow $200,000,000 additional by selling its debentures under the provisions of the regularly enacted amendments to the FHA act.

In Two Categories.

Under the terms specified by Jones, the association's operations will fall into two categories—the discounting of insured mortgages up to $16,000, and the discounting of or direct lending on insured mortgages to limited dividend corportaions or public bodies up to $5,000,000, and up to $200,000 on low-cost multi-family housing projects. Loans to limited dividend corporations will be made at 4½ per cent plus an initial service fee of 1½ per cent where the loan is disbursed as construction proceeds. The loans on low-cost multifamily projects will bear an interest rate of 5 per cent with an initial service charge of 2 per cent where the loan is disbursed as construction proceeds.

Text of the terms as made public were as follows:

"1. Mortgages up to $16,000, insured under section 203 and covering one-family to four-family dwellings, will be purchased at a price equal to the unpaid principal plus accrued interest. Purchases will be limited to mortgages insured after January 1, 1937, and secured by properties on which construction was begun after January 1, 1936.

Fees Explained.

"2. The association will expect the institutions from which it purchases mortgages insured under section 203 to handle the subsequent servicing. As a fee for this servicing the seller will be paid ¾ of 1 per cent, to be retained out of the interest collected, where the mortgage bears 5 per cent and the mortgagor is not required to pay an annual service charge contracted for under the FHA regulations in effect prior to February 15, 1938. Where the mortgagor is required to pay such a service charge the seller will be allowed ½ instead of ¾ of 1 per cent out of interest collected. The servicing fee will be discontinued in cases where the mortgage is not properly serviced, and may be canceled or altered by the association after five years from the date of the mortgage.

"3. The association will make commitments to purchase for future delivery mortgages that are to be insured under Section 203 when the transaction is completed. For such commitments, the institution obtaining them will be charged 1 per cent of the amount of the commitment, but this will be remitted upon delivery of the mortgage in acceptable form. If delivery is not made, but a satisfactory explanation is given for nondelivery, the deposit will be returned.

Application Roles.

("Note: As no mortgage association operated or controlled by the United States or by any agency of the United States is permitted to originate loans insured under Section 203, the association owned and operated by the RFC will not deal directly with applicants for loans in amounts of $16,000 or less. All such applications must be made to institutions that have qualified with the FHA as approved mortgagees to handle loans in this category.)

"4. Loans up to $5,000,000, insured under Section 207 and covering fixed dividend housing projects, and loans up to $200,000, insured under Section 210 (added in the recent amendments) and covering groups of houses or apartment buildings, will be made directly by the association, or mortgages securing loans in these categories will be purchased at a price equal to the unpaid principal plus accrued interest. Purchases will be limited to loans insured on or after January 1, 1938, and submitted to the associations for a commitment or approval prior to the beginning of construction.

"5. Loans insured under section 207 will be made by the association at 4½ per cent interest. An initial service charge of 1½ per cent will be made in cases where funds are to be disbursed by the association as construction progresses. All loans made or purchased under section 207 will be serviced directly by the association.

Loans Insured.

"6. Loans insured under section 210 will be made at 5 per cent interest. An initial service charge of 2 per cent will be made in cases where funds are to be disbursed by the association as construction progresses. Unless the association itself elects to service the mortgage, a servicing fee of one-half of 1 per cent will be allowed out of interest collected on loans bearing 5 per cent per annum. Where the interest rate is less than 5 per cent, the servicing fee allowed will be the difference between 4½ per cent and the rate of interest on the loan. The servicing fee will be discontinued in cases where the mortgage is not properly serviced, and may be canceled or altered by the association after five years from the date of the mortgage.

"7. The association will make commitments to purchase, upon completion of construction, mortgages insured under sections 207 and 210. In such cases a deposit of 1 per cent will be required, but will be returned to the mortgagee under the same conditions as in the case of commitments on mortgages insured under section 203."

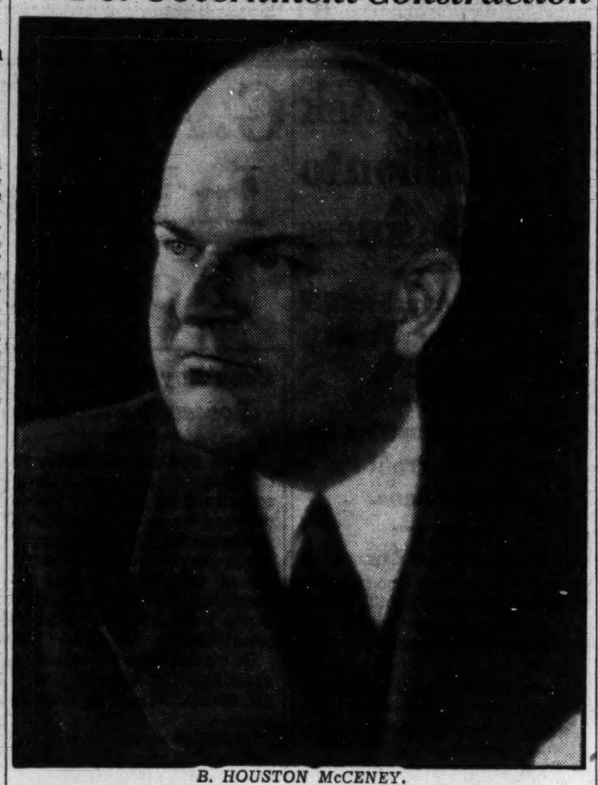
Working for Washington

Connecticut Avenue Unit Hopes For Government Construction



B. HOUSTON McCENEY.

B. Houston McCeney, President of Association, Leads Movement to Keep Section the 'Fifth Avenue of Washington.'

By Christine Sadler

The future trend in placement of Government buildings—so members of Connecticut Avenue Association, Inc., hope—will be "uptown along the Rock Creek Parkway."

"We are going to work for the movement to continue them west of Seventeenth and maybe north of Pennsylvania avenue. The area is an attractive and suitable one, and the buildings would be an asset to us," B. Houston McCeney, president of the association, declares.

The central purpose of the organization is to keep Connecticut avenue "the Fifth avenue of Washington" and to make it even more so. If a smart area begins to go down, it is hard to boost it back. Therefore, this group will work to keep the change in its vicinity always for the better. A fringe of Government buildings would further this aspiration, McCeney believes.

Big Store Hoped For.

Two other important pieces of aspiration on the Connecticut avenue list call for a large department store somewhere between K and S streets, and a theater somewhere in the same vicinity.

"I we can get a theater and department store, they will help us more than anything else. We think the chance for the store is near at hand," the president states.

McCeney's organization covers the territory from Pennsylvania avenue on the south to S street on the north, and runs two blocks on both the east and west sides of Connecticut. It was formed five years ago and is made up of approximately 150 merchants, professional men, tenants, and owners who live in the vicinity.

It has a good reputation for cooperative effort. During the past year it sponsored a radio program advertising the Avenue. Its cooperative newspaper advertising is considered one of the town's really smart ideas. Its fashion and Christmas gift shows, held at the Mayflower, are among the outstanding style events of the city. The fashion show starts off the spring season; the gift exhibition ushers in the winter.

Fight on Tax Cited.

A native and lifelong resident of Washington, McCeney has pronounced feelings on the suffrage question.

"I think our commission form of government was all right as long as the Government paid its share of District expenses and lived up to its own law in regard to our fiscal relations.

"But now the time has come when the people must have a voice in their own government. I think the Congressmen and Senators probably mean well enough, but the problem is not vital to them and things have gone from bad to worse.

"The time has come when we have got to have some say in our government here," he declares.

An outstanding illustration of the "manner in which Congress pays no attention to local opinion" McCeney believes to be found in the fight against the business privilege tax.

"There is no doubt in the world that 90 per cent of the people of the District are in favor of a sales tax in preference to the business tax," he feels. "Now Congress is asking whether we want an income tax or a revised business privilege tax.

"Some of the groups seem to be ready to compromise on a revision, but I am not ready to do so. I think we should continue to fight both of them and to demand the sales tax. Right now is the time we should fight the hardest for what we want, as I see it."

Serving His Second Term.

McCeney is serving his second term as president of the Connecticut avenue group and is also one of the directors of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations. He is secretary of Randall H. Hagan & Co., and has been in real estate in the District for 28 years. During that time he has watched the city "grow from a village" and helped much of it in the growing.

Although he never went to college, he is a life member of the University Club. "I was a life member of the old Racquet Club. The University Club took that over and now I find byself a life member of it," he explains.

He is a member of the Society of Natives, the Columbia Historical Society, the Board of Trade, the Connecticut Avenue Citzens Association, and a director of the Washington Real Estate Board.

The McCeneys live at 3106 Thirty-third place. They have two sons and two daughters. "My business and civic affairs" are McCeney's principal hobby.

On Friday—W. J. Mileham, president of the Central Businessmen's Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Smith to Indorse May Airport Bill

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, today will indorse the May bill to close Military road adjacent to Washington-Hoover Airport, he said yesterday as the House Military Affairs Committee opened public hearings.

Smith said neither he nor Arlington County officials object to closing of Military road if funds are provided for a substitute highway.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts
The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.
Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

House to Rush Approval for TVA Inquiry

Rules Group Favorably Reports Measure Passed by Senate.

By the United Press.

The House Rules Committee yesterday favorably reported the Senate-approved resolution for a joint Congressional investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority and flatly refused to exempt private utilities from the scope of the inquiry.

The vote was taken after Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), of mississippi, coauthor of the TVA act, charged that "friends of the power trust seem to be attempting to besmirch the New Deal's power-rate yardstick program by seeking to block investigation into the pernicious activities of utilities in the TVA area."

Rankin's attack was prompted by Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, who asserted private utilities are not germane to the inquiry and will obscure the real issue—whether the agency is permeated with corruption and extravagance.

Due on Floor Today.

House leaders pledged that the resolution will be brought to the floor today for prompt passage and they hope the inquiry can be started next week.

The measure calls for a ten-man committee—five from the Senate and five from the House—who will have subpena powers and will be financed with a $5,000 appropriation.

The House committee added a section directing the committee to report to Congress not later than January 3, 1939, and took extra precautions so that its jurisdiction cannot be challenged in the courts by specifying that the purpose of the inquiry is to obtain information bearing on future legislation.

Arthur Morgans Quit Norris.

Norris, Tenn., March 29 (AP).—The Arthur E. Morgans are leaving this "model" town of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

While the deposed chairman of the TVA has not accepted his dismissal, he will no longer make his home here. Dr. Morgan is in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

"I'm leaving tomorrow for our home in Yellow Springs, Mrs. Morgan said.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 29.—Public sentiment on the New Deal policy of reporting corporation salaries is about evenly divided, with a slight majority opposed, according to a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

George Gallup

One of the original purposes of the law, which is now up for renewal in the Senate, was to benefit stockholders by showing them how much of a corporation's earnings are paid to officers.

But the survey finds that the investing class is the most strongly opposed to salary publicity. The upper and middle income groups vote against revealing salaries, while the lower income class favor it.

The Institute survey, covering a scientifically selected cross-section of voters, based its question on the existing law, which calls for publicizing the names of persons earning $15,000 or more from corporations. The question reads:

"Do you think salaries over $15,000 a year that are paid by corporations should be made public by the Federal Government?"

The national vote, with all classes included, was:

Yes	49%
No	51%

The vote by income groups was:

	Favor Salary Publicity.	Opposed.
Upper income class	33%	67%
Middle income class	42	52
Lower income class	61	39

President Roosevelt went on record early this month as strongly in favor of revealing salaries as a matter of public morals. But the House version of the new tax bill calls for publicizing only salaries of $75,000 or more. The Senate has not yet taken action.

The majority of those who oppose salary publicity are against it on the ground that "what a man earns is his own business"—that the Government should not step in to invade his privacy. A second large group declared they could see no practical value in reporting salaries except to satisfy people's curiosity. A few voters added that salary publicity stirs up class feeling and provides a "sucker" list for racketeers.

Voters who favor salary publicity declared that wage earners have a right to know how much their companies pay to officers. Some voters added that big salaries were a "racket" and should be exposed. Others declared that they could not see how anybody would be injured by having his salary made known.

Navy Revives Post Of Hague Attache

Georgia Firemen Give Show for Roosevelt

Warm Springs, Ga., March 29 (AP).—The Warm Springs Foundation's Volunteer Fire Department, sirens screaming, rushed out today, stopped in front of a row of cottages and began playing two streams of water into the pines between two frame dwellings.

But all the fuss and anxiety was for nothing. It was not even a false alarm, but an exhibition for President Roosevelt. No one else had been apprised of it in advance.

House Raises Army Fund to $448,116,284

Addition of $32,853,000 for Next Year Sent to Senate.

By the Associated Press.

A $448,116,284 appropriation to run the Army next year—$32,853,000 more than this year's fund—won House approval yesterday.

Just before the members sent the approved bill to the Senate they accepted a $282,729 amendment by Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas, to increase from 500 to 650 the number of R. O. T. C. graduates in the Regular Army.

About $18,000,000 of the bill's total increase over this year's appropriation was for the air service.

The measure involves an addition of 476 airplanes in the next two fiscal years, increasing the Army's total to 3,302 planes, although only 2,320 will be "serviceable" by July 1, 1940. The War Department had 2,826 planes on hand and on order January 1.

The House accepted proposals by Representative Powers (Republican), of New Jersey, to add $75,000 to rebuild the Fort Niagara, N. Y., barracks, destroyed by fire, and by Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, to eliminate a $50,000 authorization for an intermediate Army air station at Connellsville, Pa.

Nazis Outshout Reds in Riotous Czech Assembly

Other Minorities Demand Autonomy in Critical Parliament Session.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, March 29.—Spokesmen for the Gudeten German (Nazi) Party and three other national minorities in Czechoslovakia demanded autonomy in a tumultuous parliamentary session today.

Political tension reached the breaking point in the House of Deputies when Communists tried to howl down the German spokesman, Ernst Kundt. Their clamor drowned out his voice until a loud-speaker could be hooked up to amplify it.

Even then, the Communists raised such a tumult that his words were barely audible.

Kundt declared the Prague government, if it expected to establish confidence, must agree to a new election.

A Hungarian deputy, Geza Szuelloe, in asking autonomy for Hungarians, explained that he also was speaking in the name of the Slovaks. For the Polish minority, Leon Wolf argued that autonomy was the only thing that could save the Poles in Czechoslovakia from the threat of denationalization.

(The Slovak People's Party's main plank is local autonomy for Slovakia, including finance, administration and Slovak schools.

(Slovakia, 18,921 square miles in area, covers about one-third of the nation and has about one-fifth of its population—3,000,000 persons.

(Of Czechoslovakia's population of 15,000,000, Germans number about 3,500,000; Hungarians, 690,000, and Poles, 82,000.)

Nazis Demand Changes.

Berlin, March 29 (AP).—Highly-placed Nazis remarked privately tonight that only a fundamental change in Czechoslovakia's inner political structure could rescue that country's independence.

Discussing Czech Premier Hodza's assertion last night that Czechoslovakia was "ready to do her share" in reaching a friendly accord with Germany, the Nazis said the time for weak promises had gone.

The Czech premier had assured his nation in a radio broadcast that "there is no international danger." He also had said he believed it was time to enact laws guaranteeing the rights of minorities in Czechoslovakia, possibly indicating some compromise with 3,500,000 Germans of Nazi leanings.

Meanwhile, informed quarters asserted progress was being made toward extension of the Nazi peace with the Catholic Church to include all Catholics of Greater Germany as well as Austria.

Donovan, Rejailed After Parole, Files 3d Habeas Corpus

James F. Donovan, who was paroled from a ten-year robbery sentence and returned to jail when the parole board was unable to find a suitable position for him, yesterday filed his third freedom petition by a writ of habeas corpus.

Donovan was paroled in November, 1934, on condition that he accept a job on a chicken farm in Flora, Ind. On Christmas Eve a band of vigilantes, having read of his parole, ordered him out of town. He was ordered recommitted.

The parole board admitted in the first habeas corpus hearing that Donovan had been exemplary in his conduct while out of prison.

Donovan claims that there has been no lawful revocation of his parole and that he is therefore being illegally detained. Justice Jennings Bailey set April 4 for a hearing.

Police Hunt Man In Mystery Cutting

Deeply gashed across the abdomen, George Boenig, 33, of 1326 Columbia road northwest, was found in front of his home yesterday by a cab driver and taken to Emergency Hospital, where he was said to be in critical condition.

Boenig's estranged wife, Mrs. Nellie Boenig, gave police the name of a man acquaintance as a suspect. She stated, however, she had not witnessed any fight.

Jurist Explains New Court's Work

The Small Claims and Conciliations Court, which opens Monday, will be an "effective instrument of justice," Judge Nathan Cayton told the Washington Association of Credit Men yesterday at the Raleigh Hotel.

The court will handle all claims of $50 or less, he said, will make cost of proceedings small, will conciliate claims of any amount and will arbitrate claims of any amount upon request of both parties.

School Bus Missing 10 Hours in Storm

Calgary, Alberta, March 28 (AP). Unreported more than ten hours, a school bus driven by Mrs. K. Brown was sought tonight in the blizzard-swept district of Parkland, 75 miles south of here.

Covering a 10-mile route, Mrs. Brown was to have picked up 12 pupils of the Parkland School. Austin Nixon, garage operator, who started in search of the bus, also was missing.

Russia Now Turns Purge Activities to Polar Scientists

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Soviet investigators yesterday picked on the epic of the four scientists on the ice-floe and the polar flights to America with a charge that "criminal, anti-Soviet activity of wreckers" had been found in the administration of the two expeditions. Dr. Otto Schmidt (left) was in charge but was not named in the scathing report of Stanislaw Kossior (inset), chairman of the Soviet control committee. The other men with Schmidt are V. Vorinin, scientist, and Ivan Papinin (right), ice-floe camp commander.

Duce Calls Out Air Reserves on Eve of Address

Troops Display Held Move to Impress Senate and France.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 29.—Reserves of the Italian antiaircraft force were called out tonight on the eve of Premier Mussolini's important statement of military policy to the Italian Senate tomorrow.

The reserve call was seen both as a show of Italy's military preparedness and as emphasis of Italy's annoyance over a mysterious night flight of a French warplane above Sardinia last week.

The number of reservists involved was not disclosed, but it was said the men had been assigned to anti-aircraft batteries at strategic points of the nation.

Mussolini is scheduled to outline his army, navy and air strength to the Senate tomorrow in a speech at 5 p. m. (11 a. m., E. S. T.), which will be broadcast throughout Europe. It was indicated he would ask still greater expenditures for Italy's armed forces.

Il Duce's speech was expected to be a warning to the world of Fascist readiness to meet any attack on "Italy or her interests."

(An English summary of Mussolini's speech will be broadcast via short wave from Rome over station WRC from 1:30 to 1:45 p. m.)

An official Italian inquiry into the purpose of the French flight is under way.

(One French army officer and three noncommissioned officers were killed in the crash. French authorities in Tunis said the plane probably was lost in a fog returning to its North African base.)

Rubens Witness Held in $5,000 Bail

New York, March 29 (AP).—Ossip Garber, Bronx photographer, was held in $5,000 bail tonight after a Federal attorney named him the key witness against a fake passport ring said to have helped Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Arnold Rubens to enter Russia.

Sweden Intervenes.

Moscow, March 29 (AP).—The Swedish Legation intervened today in an effort to obtain release of a Chicago-born Swedish engineer, Benjamin Kwelms, and his wife, held on charge of "counter-revolutionary activities."

Hitler Relates Schuschnigg's 'Elimination'

Says He Pleaded for Hours for Nazification of Austrians

Hamburg, Germany, March 29 (AP). Reichsfuehrer Hitler told an audience of 20,000 tonight he pleaded for 12 hours with Kurt Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor at their Berchtesgaden conference to choose gradual Nazification of Austria instead of civil strife.

"Twelve hours on end—a whole long day—I labored to convince this man that the way he was going would lead inevitably to bloodshed," Hitler said.

The two chancellors met at Berchtesgaden February 12, a month before Germany annexed Austria.

Charges Repudiation.

At the end of the 12 hours, Schuschnigg seemed convinced and expressed his willingness to sign a new agreement, Hitler said, which would have aimed at a gradual reconciliation between opposing camps.

He asserted Schuschnigg had repudiated the agreement, for "this man had mistaken my good-heartedness for weakness."

"Then came Austria's cry for help," he continued, "and I decided immediately to answer it. I was determined to eliminate this man.'

Tonight's speech was Hitler's fourth in his series preparing for the Austrian anschluss plebiscite April 10. Most of the speech was a reiteration of arguments already voiced at Koenigsberg, Linz and Berlin.

Stresses Economic Side.

In view of Hamburg's commercial importance, however, he laid particular stress on the economic side of the Nazi program.

To Reopen Furnaces.

Vienna, March 29 (AP).—While Reichsfuehrer Hitler delivered at Hamburg today the fourth fiery speech of his plebiscite campaign, Field Marshal Gen. Goering, far south in the Austrian ore country, proclaimed an imminent reopening if idle blast furnaces.

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, propaganda minister, spoke to Vienna throngs in his first visit to that city since 1932, and Arthur von Seyss-Inquart, Austrian governor, announced the procedure whereby the businesses of political fugitives, imprisoned or missing persons would be managed by state commissars.

Nazi leaders apparently were indifferent as to what would become of Kurt Schuschnigg, deposed former Austrian chancellor.

It was said, however, that under no circumstances would the death penalty be involved.

Big Guns Stop Chinese Drive To Save Suchow

Offensive Stalls After Deep Gains Along 100-Mile Front.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), March 30.—Japanese bombs and big guns today apparently stalled the Chinese counterattack which pushed back the Japanese as much as 15 miles at some points on a 100-mile front in Central China.

More than 200,000 Chinese and Japanese were in the battle, which observers said might decide the fate of the Lunghai Railway area separating Japanese-conquered portions of North China and the Yangtze Valley. Casualties were said to be heavy.

The object of the Chinese thrust was to drive back Japanese armies threatening Suchow, junction of the North-South Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the Lunghai.

Center of the fighting was in southern Shantung Province, where for three months Japanese armies have attempted to drive southward to the Lunghai and contact another Japanese force pushing north from Nanking.

In Shanghai British military authorities lodged a vigorous protest, listing instances in which they said Japanese soldiers had threatened British soldiers or civilians and had been discourteous.

It was understood the protest demanded guarantees that the situation would be remedied, otherwise British soldiers would be ordered to defend themselves.

Japanese planes were reported by Chinese to have bombarded Suchow, and struck again at the Canton-Hankow Railway line.

Purge Ordered After Schmidt's Arctic Disasters

Half of Soviet Ships Caught in Ice; 800 in Peril; Blunders Charged.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 29.—The Soviet government disclosed today that half the Soviet fleet of icebreakers and Arctic merchant ships was in danger in polar seas, and demanded a purge among those trying to conquer the frozen North.

Blunders of the Northern Sea Route Administration—which is headed by the bearded polar hero, Dr. Otto J. Schmidt—were blamed for the plight of the icebound vessels, caught in Arctic seas last August.

The number of imperiled ships was not stated, but several hundred persons were believed to be endangered by ice piling up around the vessels and dwindling food supplies.

800 Reported in Peril.

(Dispatches from Vadso, Norway, March 26 quoted wireless messages as saying merchant vessels and icebreakers carrying 800 Russians were in a critical position off Siberia.)

A relief expedition of four planes to three icebreakers in distress off Siberia failed to make a flight scheduled for February. Pilots recently flew 20 women and children in two planes from a point near Rudolf Island to the Soviet mainland.

The government declaration that the 1937 record of the North Sea Route Administration was unsatisfactory did not specifically mention Dr. Schmidt, who directed last summer's polar flights to America and polar weather observations by four Russian scientists recently rescued from their ice floe camp.

Wrecking Charged.

L. L. Belakhoff, who recently was put in charge of the political section of the Northern Sea Route Administration, was expected to direct the purge.

A terse communique in a provincial newspaper announced execution of U. Kulumbetoff, former president of Kazakhstan, middle Asiatic republic, and 18 others.

They were tried secretly at Alma Ata from March 6 to March 12 on charges of treason similar to those for which Nikolai Bucharin, famed Soviet editor, and 17 others were shot after a public mass trial in Moscow.

English Officials Watch Nazi Agents in Britain

London, March 29 (AP).—Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, assured the House of Commons today British authorities were "closely watching" alleged activities of the German secret police in England.

He was answering a question by Geoffrey Mander, opposition Liberal, who declared the Gestapo kept tabs on Germans living in England and reported to Berlin on them.

Turkey Accepts Franz Von Papen As German Envoy

Ankara, Turkey March 29 (AP).—The Turkish government, it was announced today, has agreed to the appointment of Franz Von Papen as German ambassador. Von Papen was ambassador to Austria until its absorption into Germany.

Von Papen, who was military attache to the German Embassy in Washington during the early years of the World War, played an important role in events which led up to Hitler's annexation of Austria. He was chancellor of Germany before Hitler's rise to power.

Some observers have suggested sending Von Papen to Turkey would mean revival of the pre-war "Drang Nach Osten"—German influence through Turkey to the Persian Gulf.

Swedes Back Refugee Plan.

Stockholm, March 29 (AP).—The Swedish government has replied affirmatively to the suggestion of Secretary Hull for creation of an international commission to handle the problem of German and Austrian refugees.

Zita Supporters Back Plebiscite

Vienna, March 29 (U.P.).—Supporters of the former Empress Zita, who for 20 years in exile has dreamed and schemed to restore the Hapsburg monarchy to Austria, tonight indicated they would recognize Reichsfuehrer Hitler as their ruler.

The monarchist leaders, abandoning hope of bringing back the throne with the 25-year-old Archduke Otto, Zita's son, as King, were said to be urging their followers to vote "yes" in the April 10 plebiscite on Germany's annexation of Austria.

New Light Shed On England's Torso Murder

By the Associated Press.

Cheltenham, Eng., March 29.—A man's dismembered body, found in the River Severn, a dead dancing man and his missing mysterious companion, a lonely ivy-clad cottage and testimony of England's modern Sherlock Holmes intrigued the British public today as new light was thrown on the bizarre murder case which has baffled Scotland Yard for two months.

Sir Bernard Spilsbury asserted at an inquest that shoes belonging to Capt. William Butt, who leased the lodge where the body of Brian Sullivan, 27-year-old dancer, was found in a gas-filled room, fitted the severed feet taken from the river. A Scotland Yard detective testified bricks and a rope found in the cottage were similar to those used to weight and tie the body.

Sir Bernard said the "torso man" probably was killed by an automobile and that death was caused by head injuries. The head never was found. He asserted two men must have been needed to throw the weighted body into the river.

Capt. Butt, close friend of Sullivan, disappeared shortly after the dancer's death. An unidentified man, who was riding with Sullivan the last time the dancer was seen alive, also is missing.

Sir Bernard, a pathologist, helped Scotland Yard on the fictionlike Brighton trunk murders and Devil's Beeftub killings.

Divorce Decree Won By R.H.Bruce Lockhart

London, March 29 (AP).—R. H. Bruce Lockhart, famous British agent in Russia in World War days, today was granted a conditional divorce on ground of his Australian wife's alleged misconduct.

9 to 16 are the Vital years for children

Children need special care during these VITAL YEARS of nine to sixteen. They burn up energy so fast . . . and their bodies are growing so rapidly. They need energy-restoring and muscle-building food. And they need calcium . . . more calcium than at any other time of life. Because calcium helps to build strong bones and teeth.

Don't depend upon ordinary meals . . . because they do not supply enough calcium for the growing child.

Every day, give your child pure, fresh milk—the richest single food in bone-building material . . . the food that also furnishes energy and fuel for active growing bodies.

Give him our Sealtest-approved milk . . . the pure, wholesome milk that you have known for years . . . the milk that is produced under the supervision of the Sealtest System of Laboratory Protection. Order from our milkman, ask at your favorite store or telephone us.

THE "VITAL YEARS"

9 to 16 are the Vital Years for every child. That is the period when bones and teeth are doing the most growing . . . and milk is the richest single food in bone-building material.

Landis Jailed As a Murderer; Case Speeded

Action Next Week Sought; Fireman Sobs as He Is Accused.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Indictment of James L. (Jimmy) Landis, 24-year-old rookie fireman, on a charge of first degree murder in the killing of his pretty young wife, Blanche Gertrude Landis, will be asked of the District grand jury as soon as possible, the district attorney's office said last night. Presentation of the case to the jury is expected to begin next week.

A coroner's jury deliberated only seven minutes yesterday in deciding to blame Landis for his wife's death. A short time later a charge of murder was filed.

Landis broke into tears as the jury went out to begin its deliberations. He sobbed as they led him handcuffed from the inquest room to be booked at headquarters

The same crowd, warned repeatedly against demonstrations by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, heard medical examiners describe the unmerciful beating which Mrs. Landis apparently received.

There were marks of human fingers on her throat, said Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy, and terrific blows left 15 gaping wounds on her face and head.

Pressed by Defense Attorney T. Edward O'Connell for an opinion as to whether the 18-year-old girl's injuries could have been caused by a fall from a moving car, Dr. Murphy declared:

"Absolutely not. There would have been other marks on her body and more brush burns."

This statement was greeted by a burst of applause from spectators. Rapping for order, Dr. MacDonald warned that further outbursts would not be tolerated.

Spots of blood on his shirt and neck led to the arrest of young Landis, Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett said. Confronted with evidence that he was present at the attack scene, Landis changed his denial of all accusctions to an admission that he had been riding with his wife the night she was attacked, Thursday, March 24, Barrett testified. She died Saturday.

Found Slumber Impossible.

"What will be the consequences if I tell the truth?" Landis was quoted as saying. "If I tell the truth, I won't have any defense and I'll go to the electric chair."

Although contending he was on duty aboard the District fireboat throughout the night in question and never left his post, Landis finally broke down and recited the following story to Barrett:

He and Mrs. Landis had been estranged for some time. After he was relieved from watch duty Thursday night, Landis tried to sleep, but found slumber impossible.

"Something came over me," he was quoted as saying, "and I decided to see Blanche and try and straighten things out."

It was then after 1 a. m. He drank some coffee, the story went, got in his car and drove to the house where Mrs. Landis was rooming—2014 Monroe street northeast. He attracted her attention by sounding his horn. She came out and they started to talk, while riding through Mount Rainier and Hyattsville, Md.

The girl, according to Landis' story to police, became frightened, believing her husband had a gun. He said he opened his coat to prove he didn't, but she grew more excited and jumped from the moving car near Twenty-fourth and Taylor streets northeast.

Landis said, according to Barrett, that he stopped the car and ran back to where his wife was lying. She was unconscious and he became panic-stricken.

Realizing he was absent without leave, Landis said he hurried back to the harbor fire house, Barrett related. There he discovered blood on the sleeves of his shirt and on his socks. He cut the sleeves from his shirt and burned them with his socks. Then he washed his hands, rubbed off his shoes and lounged around the fire house until summoned to the hospital by police, the jury was told.

In examining Landis' car, Barrett said, police found an unloaded .45 caliber automatic and a policeman's nightstick. Near the attack scene, police recovered a makeshift blackjack—a man's sock filled with sand—and several blood-stained rocks. Landis admitted owning the blackjack, saying he carried it in his car for protection, Barret testified.

The woman's body was found by Tommy Boss, a milkman. He called police. Investigators traced Landis to the fire house and asked him to identify his wife at the hospital.

"Do I have to?" he was quoted as asking.

It was after his hospital visit that Landis was questioned and the blood spots were found on his shirt-front, collar and behind his ear.

A short time before her death, according to the testimony of Elvira Blue, her landlady, Mrs. Landis confided that she was to become a mother. Mrs. Blue said the woman was "deeply in love with Jimmy" in spite of the separation and appeared happy at the thought of having a baby.

Dr. Murphy, who performed an autopsy on the dead woman, said, however, there was no indication of the anticipated event.

During the scientific medical description of Mrs. Landis' injuries, her husband hung his head and sobbed softly into a white handkerchief. He gave the appearance of a handsome movie-idol as he sat slumped between his two attorneys, O'Connell and Jean Boardman.

Senators Move To Free Credit Of 2-4 Billions

holding companies, now the target of the high tax avoidance levies, provided an additional year's time for all corporations (including personal), to dissolve.

The present law gives a dissolving corporation two years to complete liquidation, capital gains taxes being collected from stockholders as assets are distributed over three taxable years. The Finance committee agreed to a three-year dissolution period. This would permit spread of asset distributions into four taxable years, Harrison explained.

He said stockholders not only would benefit from the longer spread, but would have to pay less capital gains tax in the various installments, under modified capital gains tax provisions of the Senate bill. He said the change was designed to encourage turnover of frozen credit and to enable corporations that wanted to dissolve to do so without severe tax penalties.

Earlier Harrison invited Chairman William O. Douglas, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, to appear before the committee this morning to outline a plan for removal of tax obstacles now barring dissolution of public utility companies under "death-sentence" provisions of the holding company act.

Seeking simplification and integration of utility holding company systems, Chairman Douglas is expected to recommend sharp modification or removal of immediate tax penalties on utility systems seeking dissolution or reorganization to come within the provisions of the law.

A plan for encouraging liquidation through tax relief has been framed and will be discussed by Douglas, who is understood to feel Congress should not require liquidation under one law, and make such dissolution virtually impossible by prohibitive taxes under another.

Earlier yesterday Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace went before the committee to protest excise taxes on imported pork provided in the House bill, and excises on imported beef proposed in the Senate.

The two Cabinet officials were said to have argued that imposition of such excise levies not only would interfere with the present reciprocal trade program, but would invite tariff retaliations from foreign governments. Increases in beef and pork imports, they are said to have testified, resulted from temporary drought conditions in this country.

U.S. and Britain Ready to Start Huge Warships

Naval

Washington and the North Carolina, for alterations adding more than 1,000 tons, it was said.

Scrapping Cost $200,000,000.

The Navy has previously built ten battleships of more than 35,000 tons, and so has had ample experience with monster warships. It was actually building six battleships of 43,200 tons each and four battle cruisers of 43,500 tons with others planned, when the Washington Arms Treaty of 1922 scrapped them all.

That operation, costing about $200,000,000—$153,814,000 already spent and about $28,000,000 to cancel contracts—constituted a much larger sacrifice than any made by Great Britain, Japan, France or other signatories to that treaty.

Last autumn Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson named a ten-man board—five engineering experts, four civilians and a retired admiral—to advise on $2,000,000 designs of the North Carolina and the Washington.

Gun Size Uncertain.

The mounting of 18-inch guns is much less a certainty than the building of the oversize warships. Many experts contend that 16-inch guns are much more accurate and that 14-inch guns are far preferable to both larger sizes, not only in accuracy but in the fact that more guns can be mounted.

A 16-inch gun fires a 2,200-pound projectile about 20 miles. An 18-inch gun would shoot a shell weighing possibly 3,000 pounds much farther, but with less chance of direct hits and with consequent addition of much weight to the ship, besides the extra hazard engendered by the tremendous recoil.

out the 50-cent increase in the present levy on a gallon of spirits and reduced the beer tax which it had approved formerly from $1 to 75 cents a barrel.

The sub-committee left the realty and personal property tax at $1.75 despite estimates that $1.50, together with the graduated income tax and beer levy, would balance the municipal budget.

Near the end of a day in the House chock full of activity on District legislation, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, introduced a bill to authorize the District Commissioners to acquire and operate municipal parking lots.

Designed to provide a system of parking lots where motorists may park all day for 10 cents, the bill authorizes the Commissioners to acquire real and personal property by purchase or condemnation and to amortize the cost evor 20 years.

Meters Debated in House.

Charges are to be based on the costs of maintenance, operation and repair, plus an amount equivalent to the taxes they would return as private property. These charges would be lowered after the lots are finally paid for by the fees collected.

A final provision of the bill stipulates that receipts from parking meters, the District gasoline tax, and the municipal parking lots shall be utilized to buy additional lots.

House approval of the parking meter authorization came after an hour's debate in which members complained that the police do not enforce the one-hour parking limits downtown and that members are forced to leave their cars in parking lots as a result.

Representative O'Malley (Democrat), of Wisconsin, and Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, the latter chairman of the traffic sub-committee of the House District Committee, led the unsuccessful fight against the amendment.

Texans Indorse Plan.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on appropriations, with the aid of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, won the majority to support the amendment which they had previously rejected. Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, also backed the proposal.

Texas members from cities where parking meters are installed swung many wavering votes when they took the floor to declare that the devices are "absolutely successful" in their home districts.

Nichols predicted that the District Commissioners will be able to get "very favorable" contracts with the parking meter manufacturers. He said he believed they will be able to get 50 per cent of the return from the meters even during the trial period.

O'Malley renewed his charges that parking meter manufacturers have conducted a strong lobby for the legislation in the belief that their installation in the National Capital will give them widespread publicity and greatly expand their sales.

Schulte charged that 95 per cent of the people of Washington are opposed to parking meters and said that his sub-committee on traffic favors abolition of downtown parking.

"These parking meters will make the traffic problem worse," he said. "They will take us back to the horse and buggy days."

Tax Receipts Off.

The District faces an approximate deficit of $1,000,000 in business privilege tax receipts, officials estimated yesterday.

With only two more days before the deadline for the returns, only $1,324,026 has been collected by Tax Collector Chatham M. Towers. Thursday midnight is the deadline.

U. S. Takes Grave View on Oil, Mexico Is Told; Silver Is Cut Again; Cardenas Calls Congress of the electoral and civil codes also were urged in Cardenas' call.

Daniels' statement—issued in writing, which was regarding as unusual—however, neither confirmed nor denied the report he had protested to the Mexican government. He said he had discussed the situation with Mexican Foreign Secretary Eduardo Hay and expected to resume his talk later. He said nothing final had been done but that he was sincerely desirous of finding "a solution that is perfectly just and in accord with the policies of the United States."

British Pressure Denied.

There was one thing, however, on which the State Department gave a firm, unequivocal reply and that was that nothing this country has done in regard to the Mexican situation had been suggested, urged or requested by the British government. The Associated Press quoted an anonymous authority in Mexico City as saying the Mexican government felt the energetic stand of the American Government was due largely to British pressure.

Meanwhile State Department officials undertook inferentially to disavow that the series of Treasury moves—all of which have a detrimental effect on Mexican economy—were inspired by retaliation for the oil land expropriation or were designed to tighten an economic noose around Mexico's neck until that country capitulated.

Speaking in vague terms when asked whether the silver moves—the latest of which occurred yesterday when another cent an ounce was shaved off the Treasury's offering price for world silver—constituted retaliation against Mexico, State Department attaches said this country steadfastly had pursued a policy of being the "good neighbor" to all countries and especially those in the Western Hemisphere.

Mexico Suffers.

As a "good neighbor," they said, this country had gratuitously granted favors to various countries. When such favors are withdrawn or withheld, they added, it could not be said this Government was acting in retaliation.

Nevertheless, the fact remained that the more the Treasury modified its silver policy the more it hurt Mexico—because the latter is the largest producer of silver and the Treasury is the largest and most powerful buyer of the white metal. The fact still remained that the Treasury's modification of its silver operations coincided with the dispute over the American oil property in Mexico.

The Treasury has tightened its silver operations on each of three successive days. Sunday it announced suspension, effective April 1, of its agreement to purchase 5,000,000 ounces of Mexican silver monthly. Monday the Treasury reduced by 1 cent per ounce its offering price for world silver which had stood since January 20, 1936. It cut another cent off the price yesterday, leaving it at 43 cents an ounce.

Meanwhile, in interviews with the United Press several members of Congress indicated that they viewed the Treasury action as retaliation against Mexico.

Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), Montana, called abandonment of the silver purchases "a most dastardly act" and said it was "against all policies of the Administration."

"This is an attempt of the American Government to pull the oil monopoly's chestnuts out of the fire," he declared. "The oil companies were defeated in the courts of Mexico and the only thing the Mexican government could do was take them over.

"I am sure the action of Secretary Hull and Secretary Morgenthau does not have the support of President Roosevelt. I appeal to the President to revoke this order."

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), California, defended Mexico's action and assailed deferment of the silver pact as a breach by this country of the "good neighbor" policy.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, asserted that Mexico had invited retaliatory measures by violating Secretary of State Cordell Hull's "good neighbor" policy, which is based on the principle of reciprocity.

"In the last several months," he said, "Mexico has been conducting its affairs with complete disregard for the welfare of American money invested there. The tariff increase on American products, which preceded the oil confiscation order, is an example."

Welles Talk Recalled.

It was generally believed that this government has not and would not challenge the right of the Mexican government to expropriate American property in that country provided just compensation were made for the property taken. The emphasis, it was believed, would be on compensation.

In this connection it was recalled that in an address before the George Washington University Inter-American Center on December 6, last, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles referred to expropriation by a country of the property of foreigners. His remarks at the time were interpreted as directed toward Mexico.

"There comes to my mind," Welles said in his address, "the not infrequent instances where certain governments in other American republics, in a spirit of the truest democracy, have undertaken to remedy underlying social and economic conditions—the inheritance from their colonial days—conditions which have resulted in the placing of a very small percentage of the people in control of the agricultural land and of the natural resources of the entire country.

"An effort has been made to bring about a more equitable distribution of these holdings so that the average man and woman might be enabled to support themselves and their families upon the land, and in order that the people as a whole might obtain a higher standard of living.

"In some of these countries where American nationals have undertaken to reside, the holdings which they had acquired have been affected by the operation of such policies . . .

"Now, there are, of course, no two principles in international law more salutary in themselves and more generally recognized than the principle that an alien residing in a foreign country is subject to the laws of the country where he lives to the same extent as are nationals of that country, and, second, that should the legitimately acquired properties of aliens residing in a foreign country be expropriated, for the purpose of advancing the public welfare of that country, such aliens are entitled to equitable compensation therefor."

Daniels Talks to Hull.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, March 29.—The United States Government has presented a diplomatic demarche to the Mexican foreign office seeking a friendly solution of the conflict created by the recent expropriation of foreign oil properties, it was announced tonight.

American Ambassador Josephus Daniels conferred with Foreign Secretary Eduardo Hay after talking by telephone with Secretary of State Hull in Washington.

"I have just finished talking with Mr. Hull. I went today and talked with Gen. Hay about the situtaion that prevails and the seriousness of it, and Mr. Hull's deep feeling of wishing the matter adjusted in a way that is consistent with the friendship of the two countries and the rights that attach to both nations.

"I expect to see Gen. Hay again. I expect to talk with him and I expect to talk with Mr. Hull again today or tomorrow.

"There is nothing final. There is a sincere desire to find a solution that is perfectly just and in accord with the policies of the United States. That is all I can say at this time."

The country's finances earlier today has suffered a new setback when the peso plunged to five to the dollar in the wake of industrial curtailment which followed the oil expropriation and suspension of silver purchases by the United States.

U. S. Will Seek Foreclosure on 4 Munson Ships

Maritime Commission Acts Toward Merchant Line to South America.

By the United Press.

The United States Maritime Commission last night announced it would demand foreclosure on four vessels now operated by the Munson Steamship Line in the South American service, as the first step toward a projected Government merchant line between New York and the east coast of South America.

Counsel will appear tomorrow before the Federal court in New York, where Munson Line bankruptcy reorganization proceedings are pending, and request permission to foreclose mortgages on the Southern Cross, American Legion, Pan America and Western World.

Recently the commission asked Attorney General Cummings for authorization to purchase three modern luxury liners of the intercostal Panama Pacific Line to operate in South American trade. The three Panama Pacific liners would replace the older and slower Munson vessels.

By foreclosing on the Munson mortgages, the commission would have the choice of scrapping the four vessels or selling them into intercostal trade to keep them from competing with the projected trade route.

measure favorably or unfavorably to the full committee.

Opposed to Race Track.

McGenee said that he is opposed to establishment of a race track in Washington, but he added that he does not know how the majority of the sub-committee will vote.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, ranking minority member of the sub-committee, said he wanted to study the question more thoroughly before making up his mind.

"If I do vote for it," he added, "I will see to it that the bill carries a definite safeguard against foreign control and operation of the race track."

Wilbur La Roe, jr., on behalf of the Washington Federation of Churches, led the assault on the bill at yesterday's hearing. He was joined by spokesmen for school and civic associations.

Forecasting that Washington will become "a mecca of the gambling fraternity" if a racetrack is established at Benning, as proposed, La Roe said:

"Local authorities have been waging a determined and successful fight against gamblers. This bill is morally a distinct step backward.

"While this proposition has been sugar-coated with a thin veneer of respectability, the bill contains within its language no assurance as to the nature of the operators, or any safeguards against the numerous evils that surround race tracks."

La Roe urged the sub-committee to investigate "the extent to which labor is behind this measure and the extent to which those who claim to represent labor have, in effect, a financial status through the holding of real estate or otherwise.

"If you will investigate," he said, "you will find that this is not a horse-racing bill but a gambling bill. The proponents of this measure are behind it, not because they enjoy a horse race, but because they want some of the profit from parimutuel gambling."

Opposed by Federation.

Charles V. Imlay, of the Woodrow Wilson Home and School Association, testified that opening of a racetrack in the District would be a bad influence on Washington youths of school age.

Conditions which prevailed during operation of the old Benning race track were recalled by Evan H. Tucker, veteran president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, who joined in the attack.

Opposition on the ground that gambling is economically unsound was voiced by L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

Carringer was working on the Santeelah Dam in North Carolina last week when a heavy tool fell from the dam top and barely missed him.

"I'm going to quit," Carringer said. "This job is too dangerous."

A few seconds later a hammer dropped from the dam and struck Carringer on the head, fracturing his skull.

New Approved Design for Memorial to Thomas Jefferson

A site south of the tidal basin on Fourteenth street near the tennis courts has been approved for the construction of this memorial to Thomas Jefferson, a new design just approved.

New Memorial For Jefferson Wins Approval

Surrounding the exterior of the building will be a peristyle of ionic columns about 43 feet high. Surmounting the memorial will be a flat dome, the apex of which will be 100 feet from the floor.

Despite charges of architects last year that the original Pope design resembled too strongly the Lincoln Memorial on the other side of the Tidal Basin, Boylan said the Jefferson Memorial "with its curved outline" would offer a distinct contrast "with the rectangular mass of the Lincoln Memorial."

The site on the south bank of the Tidal Basin," he added, "on a line south through the White House, has been regarded ever since 1901 as the proper sit for a memorial of major importance.

"In relation to the Washington Monument, it gives the Jefferson Memorial a position on the south similar to the position of the Lincoln Memorial on the west, and completes the great central plan of the city, in which the Capitol and White House occupy the other two cardinal points on the east and north of the Washington Monument."

The site has been approved, Boylan said, by the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The plans calls for a straightening of lower Fourteenth street just before it connects with Highway Bridge. The commission statement and the architectural drawing indicate two parallel roadways leading into a clover leaf will replace the single curved highway. This would relieve traffic congestion at the bridge entrance, the commission explained.

bill. The committee took no action, but is expected to report the bill favorably today.

Long-time Loans.

The Glass bill revives the power of the RFC to loan funds to States and municipalities, lifts the present time limit of 1945 on repayment and, according to Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, will permit the RFC to make long-time loans to business enterprises.

Washington rumors over the week-end have centered about the measure. Jones said in a letter to Glass last week that he was suggesting the measure "at the request of the President," and speculation has since turned on the possibility that the President has temporarily abandoned the counsel of the more liberal White House advisers, who prefer a large spending program through the PWA, to back up Jones.

Borrow at Lesser Rates.

The measure, according to most financial observers, will not actually affect small business to any extent and it was noted yesterday that it will almost certainly not apply to municipalities, as most cities are now borrowing money at much less than the RFC rate of 4 per cent. Chicago, for instance, whose offerings are less attractive than those of some cities, gets 3.2 per cent interest, and many get less.

Some Senators interviewed yesterday held privately that the bill will mean only further large loans to railroads and other gasping big industries, while centralizing the Administration's lending powers directly in the RFC.

The United States Conference of Mayors, in this connection, issued a bitter statement last night, through Paul V. Betters, executive director, denouncing the Glass bill as "a useless gesture."

"Since the cities are not requesting this legislation, the Government might well conserve its financial resources for more substantial purposes and needs."

Jones told the Senate committee that there was an "impression" that there is a demand for business loans that can't be met by commercial banks. He scouted this belief, and said that what the RFC wants to do under the legislation is tell "anybody, anywhere, that if you've got a legitimate desire to borrow money for 5 to 15 years, why, come and get it."

Excellent Safety Work.

One of the best pieces of local news this year is the report of Safety Director Van Duzer that traffic fatalities in Washington have decreased about 45 per cent compared with the same period of 1937. That is a truly remarkable improvement. The comparison suggests that the greater care with which motorists are driving this year has saved at least 16 lives in addition to reducing injuries and damages to automobiles.

Many varied efforts seem to have combined to produce this favorable result. A large measure of credit must be given to the effective work of Inspector Holmes now in charge of the traffic division of the Police Department. The rules of the road have been more effectively enforced. Moreover, a large number of motorists have learned the cost and inconvenience of having their permits suspended.

At no period in recent months has the public been permitted to forget the potential tragedy that lurks in the careless turning of a steering wheel or reckless pressure on the accelerator. Proceedings of the Traffic Court have been broadcasted three times per week. The press has kept up a relentless safety campaign. At least the public is now aware of the consequences of reckless driving.

While hearty congratulations are in order for the achievement of the last three months, it would be dangerous to assume that the problem has been solved. Indications are that it is chiefly vigilance from many sources that has reduced the slaughter of pedestrians and motorists recently. Any relaxation of that vigilance may easily wipe out the gains that have been made. Indeed, the showing that persistent efforts can bring about safer driving should be a signal for more intensive work along the same lines.

Two Lives Saved.

Allen Stager and George Watts are entitled to congratulations, not only on the fact that both are alive after their boat capsized in the Eastern Branch, but also on their good sense. In an emergency these lads, 15 and 14 years old, respectively, manifested far better judgment than many mature canoeists have done in similar circumstances.

On several occasions last year victims of accidents on the river were drowned because they failed to adhere to the simple rules of safety. They did not stick to their boat. Allen and George avoided that mistake. It may be that they clung tenaciously to the capsized canoe because the younger boy could not swim. But in any event that action probably cheated the Potomac of two more victims.

With the return of mild weather, paddling up and down the Potomac will once more become one of Washington's favorite sports. But precautions will be necessary if delightful hours on the water are not frequently to end in tragedy. It seems especially inexcusable for speedboats to upset smaller craft caught in their wash. But when canoes go over from this or other causes many lives will be saved if the occupants will remember to cling to the boat until help arrives.

Justice Black Assenting.

The Supreme Court decision upholding the registration features of the public utility holding company act occasioned little surprise. In fact, the outcome had been so generally anticipated that a large number of companies had registered in advance of the decision.

The court did not pass upon the so-called "death sentence" clause about which most of the controversy has revolved. Great stress was laid upon the separability of the provisions relating to registration, however, and it was made clear that conformity with them would not prevent the companies from challenging the validity of other sections of the law. The major test of the constitutionality of the "death sentence" clause is, therefore, for future determination.

More interesting, and possibly more important than the limited decision just handed down is the fact that Justice Black was among the judges who participated in it, despite his reputation as a foe of the utility interests and his legislative record in working for passage of the holding company act. One may reasonably doubt the judicial impartiality of a member of even the highest court who a short time ago was denouncing holding companies as "networks of chicanery, deceit, fraud and graft."

His participation is in sharp contrast with the action of Justice Reed, who refrained from taking part in the decision because, as Solicitor General, he had signed certain briefs relating to the case under consideration. In the present instance Justice Black's vote had no effect upon the outcome of the legal contest. But a single vote may be very important, indeed, when a test of the constitutionality of the "death sentence" clause comes before the court.

It may be possible in the present instance for Justice Black to forget his past professions and activities sufficiently to enable him to take a severely impartial view of moot legal issues. But such detachment is extraordinarily difficult to achieve, and it is even more difficult to convince the public that such a dispassionate attitude is attainable in a man of Justice Black's temperament and training.

That is why the appointment to the Supreme Court of men long active in political life is undesirable, regardless of the appointee's personal ability or the sincerity of his desire to discharge conscientiously the duties of his high office.

The House Should Debate It.

At least one more difficult hurdle must be cleared by the Government reorganization bill before its enactment will be certain. Since the House has passed two bills comparable to parts of the omnibus Senate measure, it had been assumed in some quarters that a favorable Senate vote would end the fight. But the quick insistence on proper parliamentary procedure voiced by Senators Clark and Burke has assured full consideration of the complete proposal by the House.

A number of factors combined to give the bill a majority of seven votes in the Senate. Virtually every Senator recognizes the need for an overhauling of the executive departments and numerous uncoordinated agencies. They realize also that a genuine reorganization is not likely to be accomplished unless responsibility for carrying out the specific changes is placed upon the President. Apparently the majority was convinced that this power will not be abused, or that Congress will be able to correct any unreasonable move the President might make.

Moreover, the bill has been improved since its introduction. Some Senators who cast affirmative votes would like to have inserted further safeguards. But they did not feel that the defects in the bill are grave enough to justify a vote signifying lack of confidence in the President. Having voted to kill the Supreme Court bill, a number of Democrats are eager to avoid the appearance of a definite break with the Administration in an election year.

Assurances to Senators that certain executive agencies would not be distributed by the President added strength to the majority vote. Senator Vandenberg complained with a good deal of justification: "So we are not voting on the textual possibilities; we are voting on executive 'assurances' that these textual possibilities, thanks to executive clemency, will not occur." Because of the almost even division of the Senate on the issue, pressure of this sort may easily have marked the difference between passage and defeat.

No doubt the House will be influenced by the same considerations which determined the Senate vote. It is well, however, that the bill is to receive another examination. Senator Byrnes' attempt to railroad the bill into conference by attaching it to one of the reorganization bills already passed by the House was ill-advised from his own point of view. Had that stratagem succeeded, it would have gone far to justify all the fears on which the opposition case is based.

One of the strongest arguments against the bill is that it would give the President extensive new powers at a time when an increasing number of people associate the present depression with his exercise of authority already possessed. If a measure open to this charge should be rushed to enactment without adequate consideration at every step in the legislative process, it could easily become another source of unrest and instability.

The House Reorganization Committee intends to combine its four bills and proceed on that basis instead of accepting the Senate measure. This procedure will give the House a chance to vote on the entire proposal, but apparently it will have no opportunity to consider solely on their merits the proposed changes in the civil service system and the Comptroller General's office. Nor can Chairman Cochrane's promise of full debate be fulfilled if leaders carry out their plan of passing the bill before the end of the week.

House leaders ought to realize that careful and thorough debate is the best answer to charges that Congress is surrendering its responsibilities to the Executive.

Pass The Ketchup!

From a newspapers reader's point of view a good news story is a story that awakens his interest. Thus a local assault and battery case may seem more important than a distant earthquake with loss of life.

Something out of the ordinary, however trifling, takes precedence over ordinary happenings, however useful. The man who pushes a peanut with his nose down Pennsylvania avenue makes a better story than a man who does an honest day's work in mill, store or factory, even though pushing a peanut remains as foolish and as futile as it was the first time a bet was paid that way.

And thus it happens that once in a while a big news item has a way of slipping under a one-line head in the newspapers. As when, while cherry blossoms do their blooming on the first page, tucked away on the inside is the news, the important news, that the first planting of the Eastern Shore tomato crop has been made in Somerset County.

The cherry blossoms will die and will presently be forgotten for another year, but the tomatoes will go on growing. And when they are big and healthy some of them will go to market, and some will go to the canning factory, and some will be bottled.

And in due course of time you may have sliced tomato on your lettuce, stewed tomatoes with your beef, tomato ketchup on your beans and tomato juice whenever you feel like it.

It's more than kindly feelings for the Eastern Shore which make us feel that the tomatoes have been slighted.

Facing The Debt Issue.

President Roosevelt has transmitted Hungary's debt-settlement proposal to Congress with a recommendation for "most careful consideration."

As long ago as last August the Hungarian government announced that it would resume payments on a reduced scale of annuities due under agreement covering the so-called war debt—in this case a debt contracted after the war for relief purposes. At that time Secretary Hull, who accepted the offer, referred to it as a "heartening sign of recognition of the importance of conserving the sanctity of intergovernmental contractual engagements."

Payments under this temporary arrangement were begun toward the end of the year, preliminary to the present overtures looking toward a permanent settlement. The amounts involved are almost trivial compared with the total due from all our war debtors. Nevertheless, Hungary's action will compel Congress to take cognizance of the problems created by the intergovernmental debts.

Heretofore Congress has stubbornly refused to consider revision of the debt-funding agreements, although it long ago became clear that the transfer of large sums on war-debt account seriously interfered with normal movements of goods and capital in international trade besides being beyond the capacity of the debtor governments to pay.

This unyielding attitude toward suggestions of debt scaling helped to precipitate the wholesale defaults which in years has deprived us of all returns under the debt settlements excepting the small sums transmitted regularly by Finland. Persistence in this policy of holding debtors to the letter of contracts they cannot fulfill may in the end cost us even the reduced payments they might be disposed to make.

The Hungarian offer is a reasonable one, made in good faith, by a government rightly anxious to rid itself of the stigma attaching to default as quickly as its financial conditions permit. For Congress to refuse to consider such an offer would, under the circumstances, be grossly unfair to the petitioning debtor. Furthermore, it would be equivalent to serving notice that it is futile for other debtors to come forward with offers to settle.

There is no reason why Congress should fear that the Hungarian offer, if accepted, would be regarded as a precedent in negotiating other debt-revision contracts.

The United States has always insisted, as President Roosevelt pointed out in his communication to Congress, upon "considering each debt in the light of circumstances of the debtor government." As a result it is logical to assume that it will dispose separately of each plea for revision. But even if that were not the case, Congress need not have any misgivings about the Hungarian offer becoming an example for others to follow. That would be better luck than we have any reason to anticipate. For it is virtually certain that the chief debtor states would ask much more substantial reductions under a revision plan than those sought by Hungary.

Acceptance of the Hungarian offer would, however, encourage other governments to reopen the question of debt revision. Delay will not enable us to strike a better bargain. On the contrary, it can only result in increased tension and uncertainty injurious to both debtors and creditor.

We have maneuvered ourselves into a position where we can no longer make terms—we can only accept or reject offers made by the debtors. Having already defaulted, the latter are in the position of those to whom the worst has happened. While these debtor governments are doubtless eager to have the debt controversy finally disposed of, and the ban upon borrowing imposed by the Johnson act removed, it is obvious that they neither can nor will make very heavy sacrifices for the sake of limited and uncertain benefits.

Congress will, if it is wise, face realities, and admit that we have little to gain and much to lose by refusing to discuss revision of the debt-funding agreements intelligently.

You must travel 450,000,000 miles to get killed in an American railroad accident."—From statistics issued by a railroad association. It would hardly be worth the trouble.

We who are worried because we don't know what this country is coming to might console ourselves with the thought that we'd probably be considerably more worried if we did know.

Some one asks, "What would you advise a person who habitually falls in love at first sight?" We should advise him to consult an oculist or a psychiatrist.

"The average man can tell you all he knows in two hours," declares a college professor. Not if we see him first.

Survey Of Fine Arts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think that the biased and narrow dissertation on the proposed Federal Art Bureau, which appeared in the columns of your Sunday edition, and written by your art editor, deserves comment if not criticism.

In the first place, reference was made to the proposed measure with the assumption that it was to deal with the problems of art, or painting alone. The bill is far more reaching than this, since, I believe, it is to include drama, music, literature, sculpture, and all other branches of art, as Webster defines the word. However, the word "art" unfortunately does convey to the mind of the average person the picture of a painting. It is an example of the tyranny of words and because this interpretation does prevail painting has benefited tremendously in America, to the cost of other branches of the fine arts.

It would be interesting to compute the values of the various buildings known as art museums, or art galleries, in the United States, together with their contents, and compare these figures with what has been spent by philanthropists, municipalities, States and the Federal Government for, say, poetry, drama, music, sculpture, etc.

It would be interesting to know how many words your art editor has contributed, through your columns, to painting; and how many to all the other arts combined—if any? Most of the entire page on which this article appeared was devoted to art, and all of the art to which reference was made consisted of pictures and paintings.

"A mountain is made of a molehill" in elaborating upon the faults of the bill. Admittedly it is not, and cannot be, formulated to perfection. Like everything else in human endeavor, whether in private business of in the governing of a nation, we can only learn by experience where there is no precedent to guide us in the solving of new problems.

In the drafting, passing and execution of this measure the Government might certainly take a wise step, should it ascertain, through a study or survey, what other governments have accomplished in the field of fine arts under state patronage. Many countries have long been engaged in this field of endeavor, and it seems reasonable to believe that we could profit well by their experiences.

This information should be gathered before the bill becomes a law, rather than after. Vast sums are freely appropriated for studies, surveys and investigations, in every branch of the Government. Then why not have a survey in the field of fine arts?

EARL A. CUEVAS.
Washington, March 28.

Early Hours At The D. I.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: About three weeks hence, if precedent holds, 10,763 Interior Department employes will again puncture the rhythm of their lives and start work an hour earlier. They will pour out of their air-cooled building in the hottest, most wilting hour of the day to go home in a temperature representing the greatest extreme of the day's 24 hours.

No employe I have ever talked with knows why this practice is maintained. None was ever asked his preference in the matter. No one likes it! Yet it has been required every summer for years. "Traffic" and "golf" are hazarded as possible excuses for it—yet traffic is no worse in the summer than in the winter. A group of employes recently pleaded, "If these are the reasons why not let us start work at 10 a. m. instead of 8? Traffic would be served as well, golf better and sociability and health infinitely better!"

But if the objective is to ruin the summer social life of these thousands of Washingtonians and their families, and to knock about 40 per cent off of the mental and physical efficiency of these people, not to mention their dispositions, then the plan accomplishes its purpose! INTERIORITE.
Washington, March 28.

The Refugee Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of recent articles in The Washington Post on continuing to keep America a haven for refugees from religious and political persecutions, why not try this idea?

Here in these United States are certain groups who are sympathetic with Hitler and his ideas of government. They go so far as to rally under the swastika, give the Nazi salute, and hold Hitler's picture in reverence. Why not exchange these people for the persecuted ones of Germany and Austria? Let them go to a country where they could enjoy themselves under the form of government that now exists in Germany and Austria under Hitler, while we adopt the refugees. It seems to me that it would be a fair exchange.

I wonder how many of the bund members and other Hitler sympathizers here in these United States would sanction such an idea. I can well imagine the number would be small, extremely small.

IRENE RYAN.
Washington, March 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading of the movement to help get the anti-Nazis out of Germany and Austria, I'd like to offer a suggestion.

Why not make a dicker with Hitler. Let us trade him all the good Nazis in the bunds here in the United States for any of the anti-Nazis he wants to get rid of.

In that way we could help him and the ones he persecutes and at the same time clean out our own dooryard. Besides, all these fatherland fanatics should be thrilled to death to get back to their beloved Fuehrer and his Utopia.

Washington, March 2.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am only a very small buinessman, paying my honest debts, trying to keep my customers eating on half-time work, and all I have been able to save in the last five years is on my books, after working 14 to 16 hours a day.

My fault, you say? Well! Yes and no. My customers have to pay high prices for rent, food, clothing—in fact, everything they have to buy is entirely out of line when you consider the average pay check of Martinsburg is only $8 a week. And I defy any mill or factory to dispute this, when they are closed half of the time. Now I would like to hear from the average American who is working for his living, who has this country's welfare at heart, who pays his taxes, and meets his obligations, and votes for the man he thinks is the best man for the common good, regardless of his chances for election.

What I want to know is this: Has any honest-to-God American citizen a right (considering the unemployment conditions we have now) to invite thousands of another country's unwanted citizens to the United States, regardless of our immigration laws?

Personally, I think no reasonable person would do so.

German Background.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read John W. Rankin's letter in your issue of March 22. He says, "Up until 1870, Germany was a disunited group of petty states, the two largest being Prussia and Austria."

In 1866 Prussia fought single-handed and vanquished the Austrian Empire and the South German States. Therefore in 1866 (not 1870) Austria was excluded from all participation in German affairs. Prussia then negotiated treaties with Bavaria, Baden and Wurtemburg which brought their armies under the control of the King of Prussia in case of war. Thus it is not correct to say that the small principalities of South Germany voluntarily joined Prussia for protection from France. They joined Prussia under the compulsion of treaties. It is perfectly true that at the end of 1870, or early in 1871, the South German States joined Prussia to form what was known as the German Empire. Bavaria, the last to join, retained special privileges such as the maintenance of separate embassies, such privileges having been abrogated by Hitler since 1933.

Schuschnigg wished to conduct a fair plebiscite under which everyone could follow his conscience and vote yes or no for union with Germany. This did not suit Hitler, who quashed the idea, and ordered one later at which, I presume, as in Germany, only the names of Hitler's nominees will appear on the ballot sheets.

Hitler, in tears, protested against the execution of certain Nazis in Austria in 1934. They were men who had been associated with the murderers of Dollfuss. Let us not forget that in 1934 when the abortive Nazi putsch was made, President Hindenburg telegraphed his congratulations to the president of Austria on the maintenance of Austria's independence and his condolences to Frau Dollfuss on the murder of her husband.

We hear a lot about the iniquities of the Treaty of Versailles. What would Germany's terms have been had she won the war and how would they have been enforced? Nine out of ten Americans who condemn the Versailles Treaty have never heard of the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest, and the tenth man who has heard of them has never read them.

In "Mein Kampf" Hitler proclaims his intention of taking the Ukraine from Russia. When the day comes that he tries, we shall have another Armageddon.

Let us above all try to reason out solutions from facts and not from preconceptions, born of ignorance and nutured on prejudice.

Domestic Service Wages.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read again where Mr. Roosevelt is urging more people to pay better wages to their employes and I noticed again that he didn't mention domestic service employes. In all the speeches made by him and many others they never ask that this group be granted better wages and shorter hours.

If all these great champions of the working people are really sincere in their desire to help those who need it, why do they keep silent about us? As they all have a lot of servants of their own, they know all about our long hours and hard work, also very low wages in many homes. Surely we have a right to expect our government officials to care as much about us as any other class, for we also can vote. MARIAN CONWAY.

Revenue From Gambling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If we had a Government controlled and operated lottery we would have money for the needy, money for the church, money for New Deals, money for battleships, etc.

It's a shame for all our good money going abroad to Ireland sweeps, derbies, etc. Why don't you get Dr. Gallup to take a poll. A lottery would do a lot toward cutting out bookies, numbers, etc.

The Post Impressionist

Wind From Chaos.

THE boys were quarreling again as they came, sleepy-eyed, down the stairs into the dining room.

I made another firm resolve that Roger should go to no more high school affairs unless he could get home to bed by 10. These precocious modern children had too much freedom and excitement. As for Phil, at 6 he was growing like mad and never did get enough rest; 8 o'clock for him.

"What's the matter, honeys?" I said. "The expression on your faces is enough to sour the milk."

"It's this pest," grumbled Roger, slumping into his place. "He came in again and threw his toys at me to wake me up—thinks he's cute."

"Now, boys," I began, as I tried to invent some silly banter to coax them into civility; but then I glanced at the headlines of the paper Hank was opening beside his plate, and the words rushed at me like the scream of a hurricane, blackening the morning sky:

100,000 Poles Shout for War
With Lithuania; Franco Planes
Kill 600, Renew Barcelona Raids.

* * * *

Once I had seen a hurricane. All the day before clouds had been rushing furiously overhead—legions of them, one dark layer racing southward, and below it another, moving relentlessly toward the north. The sickening sense of disaster I had felt then swept over me now. Demons were riding down upon us. Fire sirens were shrieking helplessly to warn us of a conflagration long since beyond control, while a storm of wind and fury would break at any moment.

Lacey was banging on her tray, impatient for her cereal. As I fed her I watched the morning light shimmering on the wisps of hair over her forehead. I fancied, in horror, blood on her fragile neck. Would not those murderous bombs have pity on her fairness? Spanish babies were dark. They seemed for a moment unrealities, children of another world, marked for death.

It could not be that the God of War would destroy one of my babies, not mine. And yet, if he should, which one would he demand? Surely not Roger, slim and awkward in his budding manhood; and not Phil, never Phil, for already he gave the promise of a splendid life—he could never be wasted in one shattering, terrible instant. They must not be destroyed as those other children in that dim, far-away land called Spain were being destroyed.

Well, then, what could we offer as a libation to the gods to keep their fury from our dear ones? Perhaps we ought to have another child—a child to steel our hearts against, a child to dedicate to the sacrifice, a shield against the wrath to come. And yet, suppose that child grew tall and slender and blue-eyed like Roger, with Phil's brow and hair, and Indian copper skin, he would be . . . why, he would be the first boy I ever loved, the boy that carried my books and walked with me from school and let me ride his bike when we were 14. We could never give that boy, nor any other. We could never have a child we did not love.

* * * *

I gave Lacey her toast and carried Hank his bacon. He was sipping his coffee unconcernedly and smiling over the funnies.

"Hank," I said, "where can we go? Where can we go with our children? Is there any place far enough away?"

"It's not, really, a very big world," he answered, and returned to his coffee and the funnies.

Outside the window, a misty rain was falling. The grass was stretching up, more vividly green than yesterday. A gleam of yellow ran like a thread of fine embroidery through the forsythia. Spring was here, a bitter spring. Was it spring in Barcelona, where dynamite was falling more swiftly than our rain?

"Where," I thought, "could safety be?" Safety for love and beauty and the high hope of mankind—in Patagonia or in the jagged mountains of Tibet? To what unfriendly secret place in a too-small world could one retreat and cling, cherishing the divine spark of humanity until the storm was past?

"Maybe we'd better go and look for Shangri-La," I said, and turned to Hank, but he was disappearing in search of his overcoat.

Shangri-La would be the place. Shangri-La in the mountains of Tibet—but no, the Japanese are there in China, with their airplanes and their bombs.

* * * *

Hank held me briefly and said, "I'll stop and get a shad, so I may be a little late."

From the window I watched him get into the Chrysler, but instead of starting the car he hesitated and got out again and hurried back up the walk. I ran to the door and called, "What is it? Did you forget your brief case?"

He didn't answer, but stopped beside me and when he spoke his voice was harsh.

"I just wanted to tell you," he said, "there isn't any Shangri-La."

On The Road To War.

I WOULD like to hope that the next war can be prevented by collective security or by some miraculous appeal to the better nature of Adolf Hitler, but everything is against such belief.

The Germans are bulging with arrogance, and either the British or the French, though they have been backed around the schoolyard several times, to their great humiliation, eventually will get their gumption up and let one fly. It is considered jingoistic to speak of the German arrogance, but, after all, it is one of the most aggravating factors in these days of pre-war bickering, just as it was in the years leading up to 1914, and it cannot be ignored out of existence.

PEGLER

Nations, like individuals, hate one another as much for traits which they find offensive as for definite impositions.

It may be indelicate, too, to say that the British and French have been taking insults and ignoring digs in the ribs only because they were short of confidence. But their joint meekness, which passes for peace-loving patience, and the military short-windedness of the British, are no mere coincidence. Who ever heard of the British or French taking such lip from anybody as they have taken from Mussolini and Hitler these last few years?

* * * *

THE DAYS of the soldiers' war are over. Now it is war against women and children by bomb and starvation, and the dictators both have relied on the fear of the British and French that they wouldn't be able to protect their own. Give the British a little more time, though, and they will fight. They may be ready to chance it now.

Collective security would have to include Russia and it would have to be backed by collective military might. Otherwise, what would prevent Hitler and Mussolini from walking out and taking anything which the collective nations refused to sell them and taking their countries, too, or as much territory as they would deem necessary to protect themselves from future acts of economic "aggression"?

The Communists call Russia a democracy just as Hitler says he "rescued" Austria, but let us not go into that. Collaboration with Russia would be all right if it would prevent this war.

But what have the Communists got to offer? They speak of Russia as though it were an established and accepted fact that the Soviets are united and strong and eager to make a deal with us for the peace of the world. In this matter they pretend to speak with authority for Russia as though every member of the Democratic Party were to pretend to speak for the United States. But, in our domestic political matters, when you accuse a Communist of representing Russia he says, "Who, me? I was born in Muskegon, Mich., and I am as American as any man."

* * * *

BUT WHAT has the Russian government got to say? I have been listening and I have heard nothing from Moscow but news of a character which throws serious doubt on the Soviet's ability to win a street fight, much less a war. Generals, diplomats, bureaucrats and gory old head-hunters of the secret police have confessed to conspiring against their own country, and if you accept the Communists' own contention that these confessions were true then you also have to conclude that the Russian government must be rotten to its very marrow and an unreliable partner in any undertaking as dangerous as a boycott with war as a probable consequence.

If the Russian government isn't tongue-tied, it might talk up the proposition and let us see what we think of the chances of preventing this war by economic quarantine. It is my belief, that, owing to this mysteriousness and the cunning treachery of the Soviets toward this country in the past, the Americans would reject them and tread the road to war again—with Italy and Japan, the gallant allies of the war for democracy, fighting on the other side this time. I am afraid that Hitler's outrageous cruelty and defiance of knowledge, truth and everything that Americans hold to be the fundamentals of decency will make this war an easy one to sell us, but one that we never will cease to pay for.

Are concentrating on their kisses.

It must be here, for now anew
The whole world seems to lisp, "I do."

Spring is close: Vast millions shout,
"Robber!" . . . "Thief!" and "Throw him out!"

There was always the question whether to put on the work-clothes, shove over the sloop and go for a sail with the pheasant, whether to go out for a ride in the four flivvers just as he was, or whether to spend the day counting the pigs and wondering why he was keeping the old car.

The Mexican Oil Situation

People Heartily Behind Cardenas, Observer Reports.

By Jeffrey Paul.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico, D. F.

MEXICO is slowly recovering from the tremendous excitement that swept the country on the night of March 18, when President Cardenas, in a nation-wide radio address, announced that the government had decided to confiscate all the properties belonging to the foreign oil companies.

While it cannot be said that everyone has fully recovered from what happened that memorable night, the first waves of exultation, mixed with hopes and fears of the future, have somewhat died down. Mexico is now faced with sober reality. The oil problem has not been solved. It is still here. The big question of the moment is: How shall we pay the companies the price of expropriation which President Cardenas said should be done within a period of ten years?

Before looking closely at this angle, however, it would be well to touch lightly upon the background of the problem. The larger companies have been in Mexico for approximately 30 years, having received their concessions, for the most part, from the government of Porfirio Diaz. Their greatest wealth came from the Vera Cruz fields, in the Tampico region, which were found to be the richest in the world.

As time went on the oil industry grew until its foreign capital challenged that already invested in mines, railroads and land. If company estimates are true, the Mexican government is going to have to pay them the equivalent of $400,000,000 to $450,000,000. At the current 3.60 rate for dollars this will amount to 1,500,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 pesos.

As long ago as 1927 the companies were threatened with trouble by the Calles government. The crisis passed when President Coolidge talked, with unusual warmth for him, about protecting Americans and their property. Dwight Morrow was hustled down as Ambassador, and soon President Calles receded from his position and the companies did little worrying until 1934.

Mexico Feels Oil Firms Can Pay Higher Wages.

ACTIVE LEADERS had organized a strong union among the oil workers. They demanded, and received, better wages and working conditions than those that prevailed in practically every other industry in Mexico. Little by little the syndicate grew more powerful and demanded more and more from the companies.

The crisis came last fall, when the companies refused to grant wage increases, benefits, etc., which would mean an output of approximately seven and a half million dollars per year. They pointed out that, since the government fixed the price they could not meet increased production cost by increasing the price of gasoline and the by-products of crude oil.

A commission was appointed to study the company books and it reported that it felt the companies were able to pay the new demands. The case was submitted to the board of arbitration and conciliation and again the companies were told to pay. Finally, the Supreme Court was resorted to and the verdict was still the same.

Such was the situation a few days preceding the President's radio address of March 18. The board of abritration and conciliation, backed by the Supreme Court of the Nation, had decided that the companies should pay the raises, etc., demanded by the workers. The companies said flatly that they were unable to pay. Under the circumstances, it is difficult to see what road was left open to President Cardenas. The companies were incorporated under Mexican laws, they had employed the best talent to fight their case for them, and when they lost, they simply stated an inability to pay and assumed an attitude that can only be described as "Well, what you going to do now?"

President's Talk Arouses Enthusiasm.

AGAIN, they appeared in a bad light, from the Mexican standpoint, when they made an eleventh-hour bid to meet the workers demands, provided the government would cooperate by allowing them "greater freedom in running their own affairs" and, presumably, by raising the price of gasoline within the country. The natural reaction to this offer was: If the companies can pay now, why did they stubbornly insist all along that they could not pay? Are they trying to make a joke of Mexican laws?

In his speech, President Cardenas outlined the history of the oil companies in Mexico. He charged them with many things, including indifference to the general welfare of the workers, fomentation of revolutions, subsidization of outlaw leaders who keep the country disturbed, and other deeds of a similar nature. He declared that foreigners were favored over Mexicans and that, under former governments, company profits had gone sky-high because they were able to avoid the payment of any tax on oil that left the country.

PRESIDENT CARDENAS.

It is very probable that Mexico has never seen the equal of the enthusiastic outburst that greeted the President's talk. From all over the country came telegrams, messages of congratulation, offers of political, military and financial aid. The man who wore a sack suit at his inauguration, who had killed the Calles dragon, who has spent most of his four years in office visiting small towns and preaching the gospel of help for the masses, had cast down the gauntlet to one of the world's most powerful industries. Come what may in the future, Mexicans that night could not help but experience a thrill of exaltation and of pride.

That exaltation and pride, that willingness to face the terrific debt which must be paid if, as the President stated, "the national honor is to be vindicated," was expressed on Tuesday, March 22, when 18,000 university students paraded in approval of the President's action. These young men and women were not swept off their feet by demagogic phrases; most of them could be called conservative progressives, since they seldom approve the governmental program in entirety. Yet this time they moved forward in a body to show Lazaro Cardenas that they were for him and his new blow on behalf of the economic independence of Mexico.

The next day Mexico City witnessed what the press united in calling the most gigantic demonstration ever staged in the country. Between 250,000 and 300,000 people marched along five crowded streets to meet in the old Zocalo in front of the National Palace. Workmen and office laborers marched beside government employes; men, women and children from every class and every rank poured into the old square where Montezuma's palace once stood. They roared the national anthem, they cheered their President to the echo, they told him by word and action that they were with him to the end.

Demonstrations Truly Spontaneous, Says Writer.

NOW PUBLIC demonstrations, in Mexico, as in other countries, are not difficult to arrange. But this writer, like most other observers, did not have to be told that this demonstration was different. Ever since March 18 there has been a different atmosphere abroad in the city. Perhaps the public reaction can be summed up better by gaging individual opinions, as this writer attempted to do.

Foreigners said: "It will hurt foreign capital. We do not think the Mexicans, at least just now, can take over this huge thing and run it properly. Look at the agrarian fiasco. Look at the graft that abounds. Look at the snail-like pace with which government business is transacted here in the capital. Let's see what happens in the next six months."

Mexicans said: "Perhaps it looks like a hasty move, but what other recourse did the President have? The oil companies never bothered much about the workers who died of fever in the filthy camps; but they provided the best for foreign technicians and officials. We will miss the large tax they paid, approximately 40 per cent of the national debt, but we can more than make that up if everyone will get behind the oil administration and work to show the world that Mexico can be economically independent."

Certain neutral observers said: "The President did not exceed his authority. As we see it, proper management and full co-operation between workers and government officials could solve the problem. It has been said that the companies would take their contracts to supply foreign markets with them; but with the world on the edge of war, Mexico needn't worry much about markets."

To these opinions must be added an observation that is most important to an understanding of the present situation. No one has expressed a summary of the situation as has the local press. Without exception the President's action was applauded; but practically without exception it was insisted that work not words, money not shouts, and co-operation not parades, was the way to help the government in what promises to be a long and dangerous pull up the hill of economic independence which Cardenas has chosen to scale.

Mexico Now Coming Of Age.

THE WRITER'S opinion coincides, in most essentials, with that expressed by the press. What American, with even a skeleton background in American history, can forget the abuses of the oil companies in America? "The History of the Standard Oil Company" marches side by side with Tea Pot Dome and Elk Hills. The Rockefeller dimes, the Sinclair race horses, and the Doheny churches cannot obscure the intrigue, the injustice and the perfidy which went into the exploitation of "black gold," both in the United States and abroad.

It may be that with agrarian policies costing huge sums every year, with enormous road and public works programs, with education crying out for double and triple the sums it has been given, Cardenas and Mexico have bitten off more than they can chew. But the country is coming of age. Let us see what Mexicans can do with their own riches. Let us give them a chance to obtain for their country the wealth that rests beneath its soil.

The first panicky gestures in the financial field have died down. Although the dollar, at this writing, is still selling for 4.30 pesos, it is expected to reach more normal proportions in the next few weeks. The rush to change paper money for silver pesos was met by the announcement that all such paper would be redeemed as fast as it was brought to the various special agencies set up for that purpose. The rush has changed to a trickle, and it is reported that much silver is again being turned into paper money.

There remains the question of paying the companies. Lombardo Toledano suggested a tax on all those whose incomes exceeded 100 pesos a month. The President has vetoed this idea and seems to favor a bond issue, plus certain aids which state governments have offered to the central authority. Congressmen (deputies) and senators have voted to donate part of their salaries, and labor syndicates have made it clear that their contributions will be on a large scale, one of them having already agreed to send in 100,000 pesos.

Mexico is facing a crisis. No one can say, for certain, how things will turn out. But everyone who loves courage and audacity will follow with interest the experiment which Lazaro Cardenas inaugurated with his ringing speech of expropriation on Friday, March 18.

Karl A. Crowley Enters Race for Texas Governor

Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department, formally announced in Dallas yesterday that he would be a candidate for Governor of Texas. He said he would return to Washington today to resign his Federal post.

Since his appointment April 19, 1933, Crowley has been prominently identified with the air mail contract suits of the department and prosecution of mail fraud cases.

With the recent statement of Gov. James V. Allred that he will not run for a third term, Crowley's announcement makes a five-way race. Other announced candidates are William McGraw, State attorney general; Railroad Commissioner E. O. Thompson, Clarence Farmer and Mayor D. D. Renfro, of Beaumont. Primaries are July 23.

Jews Hail U. S. Aid To Nazi Refugees

Geneva, March 29 (AP).—The executive committee of the World Jewish Congress today praised the United States for proposing aid to European political refugees.

"In the face of ever-growing distress to which victims of national socialism, particularly Austrian refugees, have been exposed, the executive committee expresses to the United States Government its profound gratitude for its honorable intention to make this contribution to a constructive solution of the refugee problem," the committee said.

A Biography Of Tom Watson.

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO Tom Watson died just outside the City of Washington, having served less than two years as junior United States Senator from Georgia. But the forces that made Tom Watson the raucous politician that he was still live in many sections of the rural South. Those forces contributed to the success of Tom Heflin and the Ku Klux Klan in the twenties, and they made Huey Long a national menace a few years later. Today those forces are without recognized vocal leadership, but the ground is always prepared for the growth of another Watson or another Long.

A new biography of Tom Watson has just been written by Prof. C. Vann Woodward, of the University of Florida. The work approaches a social study of Georgia, where Tom Watson was born and reared and for nearly half a century gave expression to his political ideas. For anyone who wishes to understand that large part of the South that is far removed from magnolias and mint juleps this biography is eminently worth while. And it is a finished piece of work.

Thomas Edward Watson was born in 1856, and his first impressions were of the Civil War and the reconstruction period that followed. Poverty, however, was the predominant impression, and it was so burned into the conscience of a young and sensitive mind that it became the most powerful factor in Watson's thinking until about the turn of the century.

* * * *

AS A STRUGGLING country school teacher and lawyer in his early 20s Watson was an effective champion of the stricken tenant farmer of the Georgia hills. When, still in his 20s, he was elected to the State Legislature it was with the support of the poor farmers and Negroes. In those years Watson was a friend of the Negro, and always had his vote. It was a different Watson who not two decades later led the fight to disfranchise the Negro. It was still another Watson who finally championed the lynchings and race riots.

In 1892 Watson was defeated after having served one term in the national House of Representatives, but his name by then was known everywhere and he was a powerful political factor in nearly every campaign between then and his death in 1922. As editor of the People's Party paper he attracted wide attention in the South and West. In every race in which he himself took part until 1920, he was defeated, but he elected several Governors and Congressmen, on virtually all of whom he turned sour when they refused to carry out his every wish.

* * * *

THERE CAN BE NO generalization about this fantastic, scholarly, brilliant crusader from Georgia. He was the creature of the forces of ignorance, superstition, religious intolerance, race hatred. Yet Watson himself was extraordinarily well educated. His writings in French history attracted the attention of the French government. His periodicals were successful, and made Watson rich. But he never extricated himself from the narrow thinking that surrounded him. He was vitriolic, arrogant and not always scrupulous. Yet despite his arrant damagoguery and the failure that was his life, Tom Watson was a political leader whose life is worth studying and understanding. He was the symbol of forces which he had not the strength nor the will to evade, and which still live.

The Story of Relief

By Joseph E. Gellermann

TEN WEEKS AFTER Franklin Delano Roosevelt took office, the Administration entered the social service field and there is an interesting similarity between the methods by which we entered the World War and the manner with which we began our struggle against hunger and unemployment. In both instances we were utterly unprepared. Mammoth national obligations were incurred; intelligent and experienced leadership with the essential technical preparation was at a premium.

* * * *

AN EXPERIENCED SOCIAL SERVICE WORKER and a writer encouraged by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins have given us a most interesting study of the history of Federal relief. Their book is divided into three major parts: First, the relief set up; second, specific group problems in relief, and finally, conclusions. The authors trace the beginning of public relief to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, whose executives were businessmen rather than social workers. This unit was a loan agency created under President Hoover, which provided Federal money, but did not actually enter the social service field.

But under the following administration the Government entered that field with a bang. Five hundred million dollars were made available. "Even before the administrator took office telegraphed applications for funds were awaiting him, for by that time nearly one out of every six families in the United States, 18,000,000 people, were receiving relief from public funds."

Moreover, unlike the Hoover Administration, the New Deal placed the responsibility in the hands of social workers. The Government and the social worker for the first time in the country's history worked hand in hand.

* * * *

MANY THORNY PROBLEMS were to be encountered. Should local or national agencies be charged with the technical enforcement of relief measures? Is Federal relief a temporary expedient or will it be a permanent policy of our national Government to provide assistance for large groups of the people? Should the word "relief" be deprived of its emergency dress? The authors show how public health projects were abandoned, unemployable women retained at high pay, farmers shifted to other occupations. "Many farmers have been steadily employed on the works program for 15 or 16 months at a cash wage; they have paid their bills and added to their capital equipment; it is time they were removed from the program, at least during the summer months."

The authors go into much detail concerning old age, sickness and other types of disability, showing what the Government has done and failed to do. They show the conflict that caused a switch from FERA to WPA. The concluding chapter contains some valuable recommendations. One of these is the establishment of a Federal commission to make a broad study of needs, costs and methods of co-operation between the Federal and State governments. For the present, the authors believe, the work program should not be curtailed, the social security enactments should be fully applied, and employment conditions further regulated. The study is supported by several valuable tables.

As Youth Looks At War.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

The American Youth Commission "sampled" several thousand Maryland boys to find out how they stood in the matter of fighting in the event of war.

It is significant and indicative of the development of juvenile wisdom that less than half the number interviewed were ready to give an unequivocal answer to the question. Thirty-five per cent were ready to volunteer for service, and no questions asked. Twelve per cent wouldn't fight under any circumstances. The remainder gave conditioned answers. The most realistic were the 31 per cent who wouldn't volunteer, but would be obedient to a draft. They realized perhaps that they were in the position of the rookie in the late war who said the Government couldn't make him fight. He was told that was perfectly true, but it could put him where the fighting was, and he could use his own judgment.

It is a little unfair to the boys to expect them to give a yes or no answer to a question of this character. There are such a multitude of possible conditions which might modify their decision that a positive response either way is only partially revealing.

A better indication of the trend of thought of modern youth is probably presented in the opinion of 60 per cent of both boys and girls that war is "needless and preventable."

Merger Hailed

The famous I. D. R. A., and the less heard of Public Works Recreational Association now formally merge, something the two groups had been aiming at since the I. D. R. A.'s organization in June of last year. This makes one whopping organization in Interior, with a membership totaling around 1,500. We hear officially: "The merger is welcomed by members of both associations. It will materially assist in the development of all social and athletic programs promoted by the I. D. R. A. for the Interior employes. The merger also will make possible the development of better athletic teams, both men's and women's, for participation in the various Government department leagues."

Flower Show

Tourists to Washington this season are finding considerable enjoyment in the annual amaryllis exhibit currently run by the Department of Agriculture greenhouses at Constitution avenue and Fourteenth street. The show, open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. each day, closes Sunday.

The display includes some 1,200 amaryllis bulbs, each bearing two or three flower stems with from two to seven flowers on each stem. The result is that there are displayed several thousand flowers ranging in color from dark velvety red through various shades of pink, red, orange, yellow-orange and striped types of pure white.

These are arranged on two side benches and on a center elongated pyramidal staging. Small pots of Vinca major with rounded gray-green leaves edged with white are placed between the pots of amaryllis, forming a pleasing combination with the pointed dark green leaves, thick silvery green flower stems and clear bright blossoms of the amaryllis.

Baskets of trailing fuchsias are suspended from the roof of the exhibition house. The associates of J. Wise Byrnes, superintendent of the greenhouses, explain that the amaryllis in native to Brazil, where in its uncultivated state it bears small dark red flowers. In England, amaryllis hybrids have been developed by cross-pollination since 1799. All of the bulbs now in flower in the department's collection are hybrids resulting from many years of breeding conducted by department experimenters since 1909 when 12 varieties were imported from England.

"The department has successfully endeavored to obtain longer stems, new shades and larger flowers," it was stated yesterday. There are on display amaryllis flowers measuring 11 inches from tip to tip. Some of the flowers have stems more than 2 feet long and a wide range of colors has been obtained."

The show this year is the twenty-fifth.

Hoover

Balkan states, there is not a balanced budget in Europe.

"Every country is getting further into debt, and the next outstanding factor is the development of trade proscription barriers. Partly as the result of military policies, partly as a result of planned economy and partly as a result of currency, every nation is engaged in movements toward self-sufficiency.

"The next outstanding force is just plain fear, partly the cause, partly the result of the movements I have just mentioned."

Asked if he thought there would be a general war in three or four years, Hoover said he saw "no immediate prospect of war."

"The spirit I found everywhere was one of defense, not of offense," he said.

Moreover, he went on, statesmen in Europe are working for peace, and although war might appear to be likely, "there is always a chance to avoid it in spite of the preparations for it."

Of neutrality, he had this to say:

"Neutrality is about as dynamic an operation as war itself. No one can anticipate what future conditions may be or what tactics might be necessary to maintain neutrality."

Speaking of armament again, he said:

"The League of Nations was constructed on a basis of collective security, and as such was an abandonment of the old European idea of the balance of power. However, the idea of maintaining peace by economic force is certainly dead. I have the impression the present rearmament is more likely to mean a readjustment of the balance of power than anything else.

"The only problem in Europe that is not acute is the parking problem. They have plenty of space for cars."

Commissioners Push Juvenile Court Bill

Support to the juvenile court bill was promised yesterday by the District Commissioners.

In response to a plea by the Washington League of Women Voters, the Commissioners will urge conferees on the bill to hasten its passage.

Yesterday the league's juvenile court committee met with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to plan the necessary action. On the committee are Mrs. Jesse C. Atkins, Mrs. R. Thomas West, Mrs. Gordon Wagenet, Mrs. Richard Hogue and Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer.

Conference of Teachers Is Due to Open Today

The annual conference of State supervisors of home economics and representatives of teacher-training institutions for colored students will open today in Julia Caldwell Frazier Hall, Howard University. It will continue through Saturday.

The meeting has been called by Miss Susan M. Burson, of the United States Office of Education. Mrs. Louise Simpson Sewell, acting head of the department of home economics, Howard University, will preside at an afternoon session today.

Cummings Aide to Speak.

Alexander Holtzoff, special assistant to the Attorney General, will be guest speaker tomorrow night before Argo Lodge of B'nai B'rith at the Jewish Community Center. An open forum will follow.

R. N. Anderson to Talk.

Robert N. Anderson, special assistant to the Attorney General, will speak today at a luncheon of the Federal Bar Association at the Harrington Hotel.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Girl of the Golden West' Has Had Her Face Lifted; Now Thrills by Beauty Rather Than Melodramatics!

Old Belasco Play Has Been Skillfully Melodized by Sigmund Romberg, as Vehicle for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy; "Johnny Johnson" Resumes Tonight; Belasco Becomes a "Sundowner."

YOU wouldn't know the old girl now. With her face lifted and sweet songs lodged in her throat, she assumes a completely new personality and one that slightly baffles memories that hark back to the day, some 33 years ago, when Blanche Bates played the role.

BELL.

It ought to be unnecessary to say that reference is made to "The Girl of the Golden West," previewed yesterday afternoon by a majority of the local drama desks in the stuffy projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange. Oh, Mr. Wheeler, it is time to limber up that summer cooling system!

But about "The Girl of the Golden West." I repeat, you wouldn't know the old gal now. She has been given a "Western" accent that is mostly "Southern" and a swagger that somehow seems a bit on the side of the counterfeit. But she also has been given Jeanette MacDonald's voice, which is all on the side of profit.

Based on the original stage play by the late David Belasco, the present Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen version of "The Girl of the Golden West"—it was made as a picture by the First National Studios in 1923 and again in 1930—has been subjected to revolutionary treatment. It has been converted from a "straight" stage melodrama into a melodious operetta, bearing no relation, by the way, to the Puccini grand opera founded on the same story. The new score was written by Sigmund Romberg and Mr. Romberg did a conspicuously fine job of translating a tense and thrilling play into a more mellifluous, but not so gripping, musical entertainment.

The salient features of the plot have been retained, but they have been disguised by an elaborated and far more expansive scenic setting than Belasco ever dreamed. I doubt, too, that Belasco ever expected the climacteric episodes in his story of an older California to be sung instead of acted. But after three decades and a half that is no matter.

There is still a great deal of the merit of a deftly contrived play inherent in the structure of the new picture based on an old theme. The pattern of the drama remains the same. There is still the blood, dripping from the loft where Mary Robbins has concealed the wounded Ramerez, bandit, upon the hand of Sheriff Jack Rance to betray the futility of his love for the girl who runs the Polka Saloon in Cloudy Mountain. There is also the poker game between Mary and the sheriff for the life of the bullet-riddled road agent. But the "punch" seems to be gone from these scenes. In place of dramatic dynamite are lilting melodies. They are not quite the same in ultimate effect upon the ostensibly tingling spinal column of the spectator.

But "The Girl of the Golden West," especially for those whose memories do not hark back to the days of Blanche Bates, Robert Hilliard and Frank Keenan in the roles of Mary, Ramerez and Rance, will prove sumptuous screen diversion. It is executed in the most opulent M.-G.-M. manner and with Miss MacDonald, Nelson Eddy and Walter Pidgeon in the roles already referred to, will completely fulfill the expectations of those who anticipate an amplified and extravagant transcription to celluloid of a play that was not notably spectacular in its original form.

The new picture has been given the advantage of a sepia film tint that adds greatly to the beauty of its many majestic scenes. The film is "big" in its every dimension. You will want to see it when it opens on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday. To enjoy it most, you also will want to forget the revered Mr. Belasco's stage play—in case you happen to remember it.

Who was that phone call from just a few moments ago? That phone call was from Ward Morehouse, dramatic critic and columnist of the New York Sun, who stopped off in Washington, on his way to the Shenandoah Valley, long enough to take himself a swim in the Shoreham pool. Mr. Morehouse, who has been dropping in and out of the National Capital all season, wanted to know what kind of a year we have had here in the theater. I told him and he seemed glad. Incidentally, he remarked also that the New York "death watch" was particularly pleased to be able to give Ethel Barrymore enthusiastic notices for her excellent work in Mazo de la Roche's new play of "Whiteoaks," which seems to have gone over with what is colloquially referred to as a "bang" on Broadway. It was pleasant to have anticipated Mr. Morehouse and his confreres on the Manhattan press by something like ten days in a favorable estimate of Miss Barrymore's new vehicle. One gathers that Ward will be stopping off here again in a few days, once he is satiated with the beauties of the valley.

All of the good things in the theater do not have to be relegated to the past tense. For example, tonight is the night the "second run" of Paul Green's antiwar play of "Johnny Johnson" begins in the Wardman Park Theater, under the aegis of the Washington Civic Theater. The play, heartily acclaimed last week, will continue throughout the remainder of the present week.

Mr. Green, author, in concert with Mr. and Mrs. Washington, audience, placed the stamp of his approval on the Civic's simplified and definitely stylized production of his engaging drama. It is given a new interpretation here, insofar as its material investiture is concerned.

"Johnny Johnson" is provocative and powerful without being too solemn for mass enjoyment. It would be a good idea to see it in order to keep your list of discussible plays up to date.

And it would be well to cast an eye over the "Film Time Tables" appearing elsewhere in this paper today. The Belasco Theater has revised its schedule of presentations of "Mayerling," costarring Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, whereby it becomes an afternoon and evening attraction, instead of one also available during the earlier hours of the day.

Zoological Note.

This will be in conjunction with the screen showing of Ernst Lubitsch's "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," the screen comedy costarring Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper.

Unique Dance.

Convicting.

Dog Is Given Hero's Burial

At the height of the great Southern California storm Oliver realized the family home at Reseda was in danger and prepared to depart with Mrs. Oliver, their 10-year-old daughter, Lorna, and "Fellow."

While Mr. and Mrs. Oliver were carrying clothing and blankets to their automobile Mrs. Oliver stepped into the living room. "Fellow" refused to permit her to walk across the room.

She brushed him hurriedly aside. "Fellow" leaped at the metal standard of a floor lamp as if in attack. Sparks flew. "Fellow" was electrocuted.

Offices

General Accounting Office exemption from abolition. The Warren bill, dealing exclusively with merger powers, lists the GAO. along with 11 other Federal agencies specifically exempted.

Agencies also protected under the House bill are the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Power Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the National Bituminous Coal Commission, the United States Maritime Commission, the Engineer Corps of the Army, the Coast Guard and the Tariff Commission.

A second House measure to be incorporated into the new omnibus bill leaves in the General Accounting Office the functions now exercised by it in settlement and adjustment of accounts and claims and the rendition of advance decisions on spending of Federal funds. The Senate bill assigns current controls to the Budget Bureau.

Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, author of the House provision, reported it "would be unwise to vest such functions in the Treasury department, which is largely a spending agency, or in the Bureau of the Budget, which would then have the approval of estimates of appropriations and the control of expenditures."

Decision to substitute the four original House reorganization bills for the Senate measure was reached at a meeting of Democratic members of the Reorganization Committee yesterday morning. Formal action will be taken at a meeting of the full committee this morning.

Open to Amendment.

Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, committee chairman, and Representative Warren announced the plan of action on the floor yesterday. Cochran further announced that the bills will be "thrown wide open to amendment" on the House floor.

"It is our purpose," said Representative Warren, "to maintain the position of the House and to bring in the reorganization bill by striking out all of the Senate bill and inserting the four House bills, so that when the measure is called up, members may not make the charge that they have not had access to the reports."

Maneuvering to delay a vote until next week, opponents of the legislation apparently were counting on a repetition this week-end of the radio, mail and telegraph protests from throughout the country that preceded final Senate passage.

He said Senate approval of the bill "proves that the Senate cannot be purchased by organized telegrams based on direct misrepresentation."

The substitute bill to be reported today by the House Reorganization Committee will have privileged status, but no accompanying rule will limit debate. If present plans are followed, leaders will move to shut off debate and proceed to a final vote before week-end adjournment, and a test of opposition strength will be provided on that vote.

Conference rewriting of reorganization bill provisions will follow, and the opposition's last stand will be made against adoption of the conference report. Senate opponents said it may be possible by that time to overcome the narrow margin by which the bill was originally passed in that chamber.

Civil Service Fight Seen.

Probably the principal House fight will center on proposals to abolish the three-man Civil Service Commission and to substitute a single civil service administrator with wide powers over an expanded merit system. The House has been traditionally unfriendly to civil service expansion, which is one of the reasons the proposal was not submitted to the chamber as a separate measure in the first place.

Representative Lamneck, an opposition leader, said his chief criticism will be directed at proposals to set up a new auditor general and at creation of a new Department of Welfare, with an officer in the Cabinet.

"The new department would recognize Federal relief as a permanent part of Government policy," said Lamneck. "It would give WPA a strongly entrenched status, and encourage continued use of reief funds as a vote-getting instrument."

WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins has been mentioned as the probable Secretary of Welfare, if the new department is set up.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, who surprised colleagues by voting to recommit the bill and against passage, said he objected to abolition of the bipartisan Civil Service Commission.

Wagner said he also obected to power for the President to abolish agencies and shift functions subject only to disapproval by a two-thirds majority of Congress. He said he would have supported the bill if Congress could have vetoed the President's orders by concurrent resolutions, requiring only a majority vote.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 29.—After floods, winds and races, spring has descended like a roaring lion, which always sends my thoughts zooming in a romantic direction.

HEDDA HOPPER.

This time it's "The Thin Man." We know where Bill Powell is. But what is Mrs. Thin Man doing? Meaning Myrna Loy.

Myrna never had a home until she and hubby Arthur Hornblow built a Monterey farmhouse. Designed for comfort, not show—the sort of place where you take your dogs along to tea—I mean those on a leash, together with the tired ones you walk in on.

Before she married, Myrna was so restless she moved every month. Never knew the color of her curtains. That isn't the case now. She uses the kitchen as a laboratory, not a passageway, and dishes up some of the best things you've ever tasted. Digs in the garden and doesn't give a darn how many freckles she adds. She has a whole acre of flowers and three acres covered with lime trees.

They wanted to name the roadway leading to her house Loy Drive. She said, "Nothing doing," so it's Lime Orchard road.

Myrna doesn't care for dress-up clothes except when she's playing in pictures. The studio ones satisfy her taste for soft, clinging feminine things. She usually wears co-ed sport clothes. Her friend and stand-in shops for them.

Myrna must have a bit of gypsy blood in her, because very often on a Sunday morning she and hubby scoot off into Mexico for a day's jaunt.

She's mad about music. She has two Capeharts, playing 20 records each. The blonde one in her dressing room, given her by Arthur, is turned on to a symphony the minute she arises each morning.

When she does entertain, she shoots the works. Considers 14 or 20 people a huge party. Usually has Spanish troubadours and professional dancers.

I always howl at the number of people who take credit for rescuing Myrna from the slanty-eyed, slithery sirens to a natural, gracious lady. But I'm telling you that it was E. H. Griffith, director of "Rebound," starring Ina Claire. He tested 17 girls before Myrna.

In looking at Myrna's test in the projection room Saturday night, Ina turned to Griffith and said, "That girl couldn't possibly take a man away from me." To which Griffith replied, "We begin the picture Monday. If between now and then you find a girl who could take a man away from you—all right. Otherwise, she's my choice."

Myrna not only took the man in the picture, but darned near took the picture. And she hasn't stopped climbing.

Col. Byard Sneed Dies in Illinois

A native of Macedonia, Ill., he was graduated from West Point in 1906 and commissioned a second lieutenant of Infantry. He was on duty here with the purchase, storage and traffic division of the general staff from January, 1919, until March, 1920. He returned to the War Department in 1924 for a four-year tour of duty in the office of the Adjutant General.

Col. Sneed, who retired from active duty in 1932, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anne Lyle Sneed, of McLeansboro.

Lumberjacks Coming Here For Folk Fete

Wisconsin people not only know all the legends about Paul Bunyan, the biggest he-man in American folklore, but they believe every word of them, according to Dr. J. H. Wallis, Mayor of Rice Lake City.

"Paul Bunyan was born in Wisconsin, of course. We think it was somewhere in the Rice Lake neighborhood. We believe it's true that the Great Lakes are the footprints of his blue ox, Babe.

"We also believe that it once was so cold in our State that even when some of the Paul Bunyan tribe burned 8-foot logs in the cookstove they could not get the temperature above zero. The fire itself was cold," he declared yesterday.

Dr. Wallis, a surgeon, who serves as mayor between operations, is in Washington to get a broadcasting license for Rice Lake's first broadcasting station.

He brings the important news that Wisconsin is sending lumberjack groups to the fifth annual National Folk Festival, which will be held in Constitution Hall May 6, 7 and 8 under auspices of The Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

The lumberjacks, who appeared on a national festival program for the first time last year in Chicago, will come here under sponsorship of the Indian Head Association, formed to boost the vacation facilities of 13 Wisconsin counties.

The river boundaries of the counties show up on the map as the outline for a classic Indian head. "It's just the head that is on the Indian head coins," Dr. Wallis said, "and it encloses a fishing and hunting paradise."

IN RADIO, TOO THEY DISCUSS THIS SUBJECT:

BETTY MIDDLETON ASKS RAY WINTERS, THE ANNOUNCER:

"RAY, ARE CAMELS REALLY SO DIFFERENT FROM OTHER CIGARETTES?"

THIS IS RAY WINTERS, FOLKS, WISHING YOU ALL GOOD NIGHT
HAVE A CAMEL, BETTY?
THANKS, RAY. SAY—YOU NEVER SMOKE ANYTHING BUT CAMELS. ARE THEY SO DIFFERENT FROM OTHER CIGARETTES?
NO TWO WAYS ABOUT IT, BETTY. I'M REHEARSING OR ON THE AIR FOR 40 HOURS A WEEK. IT'S TOUGH ON MY NERVES, DIGESTION, AND ESPECIALLY MY THROAT. MY CIGARETTE MUST AGREE WITH ME. AND CAMELS DO—IN EVERY WAY

WHEN RAY WINTERS SIGNED OFF (above) he had a long, hard day behind him. Ray has thought a lot about which cigarette best fits in with the nerve-and-energy-consuming work he does. So, when Betty Middleton asked him about smoking, he spoke with the best experience in the world—personal experience. "Camels are distinctly different from other cigarettes," is his verdict. "Camels agree with me. In all the ten years I've been enjoying them, I've never known Camels to make my throat feel scratchy. Or my nerves ragged. That speaks pretty well for Camel's mildness, doesn't it?"

MORE and more experienced smokers are concluding: "Camel is the cigarette that agrees with me." If you are not now smoking Camels, try them. Look for the difference. Find out for yourself what it means to enjoy Camel's finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic.

• • •

PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAMELS

Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic

ONE SMOKER TELLS ANOTHER

"CAMELS AGREE WITH ME"

TOBACCO PLANTERS REPORT

"The favorite with most men who grow tobacco," is what Vault Snowden, veteran planter, calls Camels. "Camel bought the choice tobacco of my last crop. I've smoked Camels for 19 years."

B. F. Bivins, experienced tobacco grower, knows what cigarette pays more for the choice leaf tobacco. "The Camel people sure do get the best grades," he says. "Take my own crop last year. Camel bought the best lots. You bet, I smoke Camels."

"I know a lot about the quality of the tobacco that goes into various cigarettes," James Graves, well-known planter, says. "Most of the growers around here—myself included—sold the best leaf tobacco of their last crop to Camels. So I smoke Camels."

"I know they use more expensive tobaccos in Camels," Harold Craig starts out. "I had a fine grade of leaf tobacco last year. At the auction, Camel got the best of my tobacco. That was true with most planters I know, too. Yes, sir, Camel is my cigarette."

"The Camel people bought the best leaf tobacco of all my last crop," says T. N. Williams. "There isn't any question about where the more expensive tobacco goes. It goes into Camels. I prefer Camels and most other planters do, too."

Cherry Blooms All the Vogue In Night Clubs

Cocktails, Dances, Spectacles Named After Blossoms in Various Spots.

By Chanticleer

The Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh will stage its own private Cherry Blossom Festival tonight. There will be no fireworks, but Zanette and Manya, staying over another week, will provide a substitute. The Pall Mallettes, as those young beauties from the Virginia Hunter School are called, are enlarging their part of the program, with Miss Betty Cavenaugh in a solo.

The opening number on the floor show is dedicated to all lovers of the waltz. In a contest for the customers, a bottle of champagne will go to the winner.

After ten successful weeks in Florida, Nina Olivette, "Queen of Comedy," is returning to the Shoreham. You may remember La Olivett in the musical comedy, "On Your Toes." Dmitri is with her. Charles Carlile continues his original song renditions. Carl Sayton and partner do equilibristic marvels, and Barney remains the marvel of memory.

The boys in Johnny Shaw's orchestra spent the week-end at Solomon's Island as guests of the Bowen clan. It gave them much to talk about at the local jam session that brings the elite of local bands to the Madrillon early in the morning.

Talent at Lotus.

The Lotus this week has a variety of talent. The fast moving revue, "Buster Keim Girls," opens the show. Then come Wales and Brady in a semiacrobatic bolero. Two novelty tap numbers are presented, the first done by Peggy and George on a drum, and the second by Peggy King and the chorus on roller skates. George Stokes does an acrobatic act and the show climaxes in a Big Apple number by all members of the cast.

Between numbers and during intermission, Frank Gagen and his boys pick their way through the tables playing requests. The novelty is that each time they use a different combination of instruments.

Little Sammy Ferro, the drummer with the Paul Kain Band at the Metronome room of the Wardman Park Hotel, may be tiny, but he does triple work on drum, vibraphone and trombone when the band finishes their new specialty number dubbed "The Circus."

A cherry blossom number is the high spot on the Bamboo Continental Show. Lovely girls and smooth dancing are the features, in addition to Keller and Martin, shag team, the Mountain Sisters with acrobatics, and Audrey Hayes.

Always in accord with the season, the Hi-Hat is now offering, for the fourth year their cherry blossom cocktail. The string swingsters continue.

The Rainbow Room of the Hamilton Hotel proves to be a popular rendezvous for both native Washingtonians and the crowds here for the cherry blossom spectacle. Malt Davis and his orchestra are the attraction.

Down in the Southeast.

Jimmy Crandall, down in the Southeast, has found a policy of no-cover, no-minimum charge pays. Mac McCaffery and his orchestra furnishes music.

To impress visitors from out of town, go to the Russian Troika on Connecticut avenue. The atmosphere here is strictly foreign but very friendly and sooner or later during the evening you are bound to spot at least one Representative or Senator. The gleaming satin costumes of entertainers expertly designed are alone worth the trip.

Dancers Entertain at Lotus

CARL WALES AND LEONA BRADY, a dance team appearing nightly at the Lotus which specializes in rhythmic numbers of the adagio type.

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Cubertson

Signal Cards.

Despite the reams that have been written about signal cards, their function and their importance, thousands of players still do not appreciate their correct usage. Once more I wish to point out that an unnecessarily high follow-suit card should not be used to indicate the possession of high honors in the suit. In almost every instance this message is quite unnecessary. A high signal does not say "partner, I have such and such a card in the suit you have led." If properly used, a signal card says either "come on!" or "shift!"

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ A K 7 2 ♡ A K 10 5 3 ◇ Q 6 4 ♣ 7
♠ 8 4 3 ♡ 9 6 ◇ A J 9 8 ♣ Q J 10 5	North West East South	♠ 9 6 ♡ J 7 2 ◇ K 10 5 ♣ A K 9 6 2
	♠ Q J 10 5 ♡ Q 8 4 ◇ 7 3 2 ♣ 8 4 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South really was too weak to make any response to North's opening heart bid. Since he did choose to hold the bidding open, however, it should be noted that his spade response was by all odds the best available. One notrump would have been a horrible choice and two hearts out of the question.

West opened the club queen, and East ostentatiously played the nine-spot. His object in so doing is rather difficult to figure out except along the lines mentioned above, namely, that he wanted West to know that he had very good clubs. Considering that West would have that knowledge the moment the club queen held the trick, East's intention appears rather absurd, and the fact that his partner misinterpreted the "message" was quite natural.

West, not dreaming that East would attempt to tell him something that he could see for himself, took the high club signal to mean merely that East did not wish a shift. Since East could see dummy's heart suit as well as West could, the only justification for calling for a club continuation was that East had the heart suit well stopped and that he could not stand the normal shift to a diamond. West, with faith in his partner, followed orders. He continued with the jack of clubs, and after that declarer had no difficulty in running ten tricks.

East's high club, after dummy's singleton appeared, was a horrole play. With no stopper in hearts, East should have seen that successful defense almost certainly depending on snaring diamond tricks in a hurry. Hence, instead of playing the club nine on the first trick, East should have welcomed the opportunity to play the deuce, demanding a shift. West would easily be able to read that this shift should be to diamonds and, if he played properly, would lead the diamond jack so that in case East had the king and two small, and declarer the ten-spot, three diamond tricks could be run by the defenders.

That the declarer should have fulfilled his impossible contract was quite a blot on East's escutcheon.

$10,000 Hale Will May Be Contested

A legal battle loomed yesterday over the $10,000 fortune left by Olivia and Roberta Hale, descendants of a once-proud Virginia family, who died recently after living more than 30 years on charity.

Simultaneously with naming of A. Gwynn Bowie, Upper Marlboro attorney, as executor of the estate, by William T. Davis, register of wills, one of the nephews named among the heirs—John Alexander Hale—petitioned the District Supreme Court to name him administrator.

Earle Directs Aide to Launch Coercion Study

Civil Rights Head Will Investigate Charges of Sen. Guffey.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 29.—Gov. George H. Earle ordered an investigation today into charges of political coercion of State jobholders as lines tightened in a fight for control of the Democratic Party in Pennsylvania.

The charges were made by Senator Joseph F. Guffey, who bolted the State Democratic committee's selection of Charles Alvin Jones as its candidate for Governor to support C. I. O.-backed Thomas Kennedy.

The Governor, who was slated also by the committee for Senator, instructed John Sullivan, director of the bureau of civil rights, to "look into the so-called charges of coercion."

Meanwhile, Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, making what he termed a "lone-wolf" race for the Democratic nomination for Governor, promised in a radio address to "abolish the spoils system in Pennsylvania" through creation of "a real civil-service system," if elected.

With the lists of candidates closed for the May 17 primary, the position of Republican-elected Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, in the Democratic fight has yet to be clarified.

Wilson announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator at Kennedy's campaign headquarters, but did not say whether he would have a position on the Kennedy ticket.

Double Blossoms Are Due in 10 Days

Although the single cherry blossoms at the Tidal Basin will be gone, or nearly so, this week-end, the double variety in East Potomac Park should be out in about 10 days, Parks Superintendent Finnan said yesterday.

A week after the first blooms, the trees still presented an attractive sight yesterday but the petals were falling fast.

High temperature yesterday was 59 degrees at 4:30 p. m. and the low was 40 at 7 a. m. Possible showers and mild temperature were forecast today.

Vaccine for Boils, Sinusitis, Pimples and Acne Is Tested

By the Associated Press.

Boston, March 29.—Medical science today appeared on the threshhold of another major advance—a vaccine that will really immunize the many sufferers from boils, sinusitis, pimples, acne and certain shaving troubles.

Research begun in the laboratories of the famous Massachusetts General Hospital and completed at London has ended with the discovery that animals definitely can be immunized to these pus infections.

The hospital now is immunizing human patients with these infections, but there has not been time enough or patients enough for medical science, traditionally conservative, to announce it can vaccinate an individual against infection.

Five Years Yet.

It will be five years, physicians think, before sufficient data is assembled to make definite commitments, but, they say, "the indications are good that something really has been found."

A "progress report," outlining this research, was presented recently in Boston at a surgical society meeting.

Specifically, it was reported then that what had been proved was that the staphylococcus germ, which causes the pus infections, was surrounded by a capsule. It was this capsule which gave it its virulence.

Any Hospital Competent.

Pneumonia germs are similarly surrounded with capsules. Pneumonia serums break down these capsules and the germs are then easily destroyed by the white blood cells.

New Cure for Pellagra.

New York, March 29 (AP).—Dr. Thomas D. Spies, of the University of Cincinnati, described before the Milbank Memorial Committee today the successful use of a new chemical substance in the treatment of pellagra.

The new treatment contains nicotinic acid, which is found in meat, milk, eggs, liver and yeast. Dr. Spies said one of its greatest virtues was its trifling cost.

Flush Excess Acid Waste and Poisons From Kidneys

Comfort Your Irritated Bladder and Stop Getting up Nights

Thousands of intelligent people have backache almost every day and don't know what causes it—others are nervous and irritable—thousands have to get up often at night—have frequent or scanty passage that sometimes smarts and burns—others have puffy eyes and shifting pains.

Perhaps the kidneys are to blame—sometimes waste, excess acid and poisons do not get thru the delicate filters of the kidneys fast enough—they accumulate and may cause trouble.

Pharmacists can tell you that one grand and effective kidney diuretic and stimulant is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—they bring results when a good kidney medicine is indicated.

But be very sure to ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—for your health's sake—reject imitations.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How should a woman treat a man she loves? Instead of tiring you with the details, I shall speak in symbols. Five years ago I was content with life in general but found it monotonous at times. The Road I traveled was not easy but I was young and scarcely ever grumbled. Glancing back one day I saw a Man walking along my Road. He seemed indifferent, so I said: "How do you do?" and walked on. (This man, I later learned, was well educated, well liked by women and respected by men.)

* * * *

He began walking my way. I continued to walk on indifferently and time passed that way for a while. Then I began to care for the man and did a ridiculous thing. I began to make love to him. Immediately he disappeared. I think he grabbed his hat and ran for dear life. Well, I sighed and walked on my way again. Then, lo and behold! he came my way once more. This time I was very indifferent, seemed scarcely to notice him. He walked on quietly. Much time passed and again I did a strange thing. I made advances toward friendship with him. He smiled in a noncommittal way and one day said: "I am getting ready to take the fatal leap next week. Soon I shall begin to raise potatoes and babies." I felt hurt but managed to wish him every happiness. Love is like that. What can we do?

* * * *

I got older and wiser after that and was beginning to become reconciled to the empty road when the Man appeared again. He, too, was sadder and older. We were friends now, certainly. But a quieter and deeper feeling had entered, too. When he entered a room, I knew he was there. I was aware of him at all times. When he looked at me I felt he understood all my thoughts. I began to know him thoroughly. He has a beautiful character and never once made love to me; never once spoke of anything personal; nor did we ever talk alone together. Nevertheless, I continued to care for him.

* * * *

Tell me, please, how do I go on from here? I want to go away and forget him if that is possible; but I don't believe it is. I know nothing about his home life. I have never seen his wife. I know nothing about him except his character and that he seems wonderful to me. Although he talked to me a little once, hinting that his wife bored him, he has given me no reason to care so much. And I am not in the least ashamed of caring so much, because it seems such an enchanting, beautiful thing. But I do so much want to laugh again.

* * * *

First: How should a woman treat a man she loves? Second: How should a woman forget the man she loves? Two tiny questions, but they take in a lifetime. At least, that is how it looks to me today.

LONELY.

Cure for Reverie..

DEAR LONELY: This problem, as I see it, is much one-sided ado about nothing. Lacking a real romance, you have invented an imaginary one. This man, I gather, is someone you have known, most casually, as an office associate or business acquaintance, who, up to the time of his marriage, never gave you more than an amused second thought, and who, even today, is probably no more interested in you than the average married man is interested in the girl who makes no secret of her crush on him.

* * *

You ask: How should a woman treat the man she loves?. That, my dear, depends entirely upon the circumstances which surround the relationship. If the man doesn't love her and is married to another; if their social lives lie completely apart; if they meet only in the business world, she should treat him with pleasant impersonality. Not by word or glance or gesture should she drag her unsolicited regard into the open.

* * * *

How should a woman forget the man she loves? In a case of this kind, by realizing, first of all, the dangers of trying to make reverie a substitute for reality; and by resolving to correct the poisonously unwholesome practice, which has a detrimental effect upon one's psychic and nervous health; by changing jobs, if that is at all possible, and if in so doing she will be obviating the chance of crossing the man's path; and by devoting her leisure hours to definitely recreational pursuits which will bring her into contact with other human beings and so commit her to extroverted, rather than introverted, living.

* * * *

The literal and specific prescription for forgetting is—get a beau of your very own; a friendly, kindly, companionable man with whom to walk and talk, dine and dance, laugh and quarrel, study and play. You can scarcely hope to find such a companion unless you come out of that imaginary world of "Let's Pretend" and investigate the possibilities of the actual world in which you live. Such self-delusive tomfoolery as you have been indulging in is not uncommon among adolescents, but it is something to be ashamed of among adults. The average adult, on reading your letter, will find it irritatingly sophomoric. The reason you speak in symbol, do doubt, is because there is so very little of creditable fact, circumstance or detail to give.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

'First Aid' for Cooks.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The housewife who is catering to a member of the household on a reducing diet will need to use some ingenuity. The obese person always has indulged himself; that is why he is obese. For articles of diet and menus which he will miss, I suggest the following substitution recipes:

Soy bean bread—One cup soy bean flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon shortening, two-thirds cup water, four egg yolks, four egg whites. Combine the flour, salt, baking powder, fat, water and egg yolks. Fold into this the egg whites which have previously been beaten stiff. Pour into greased loaf tin and bake in a moderate oven 30 to 40 minutes.

Rhubarb pie—Make crust, using Golden Spread instead of butter. Filling: Cut up rhubarb and cook without water. Thicken by boiling one and one-half cups of the cooked rhubarb with the yolks of two eggs. Stir constantly, remove from fire and add two grains crushed saccharin. Bake in crust one-half hour.

Cantaloupe balls and pitted red cherries or peeled grapes.

Honey dew melon, chilled and served with quarter of lime and a sprinkling of powdered ginger.

Whole or half fresh peaches peeled and sprinkled with lemon juice to prevent turning black. Served with crushed fresh raspberries.

Pie crusts—May be made of cellu, a cellulose substance with no food value.

For those with a tasty tongue I suggest eggs russe and filet of sole Sara.

Eggs russe—Hard poach the eggs. When cold carefully remove the yolks. Cream with enough mineral oil to make a moderately thick paste, add caviar and replace in the white. Arrange a bed of lettuce, on which lay slices of tomato; place the eggs on the tomatoes and mask with mineral oil mayonnaise.

Filet of sole Sara (au vin blanc)—(Filets of whitefish may be substituted.) Boil the bones and heads of the fish three to four hours. Season with salt and pepper and strain through muslin. Melt one tablespoon of Golden Spread, add one tablespoon flour and blend. Add the strained liquor from the bones (about three-fourths of a cup) and one-half cup of any ordinary white wine, simmer for a few minutes and pour over the broiled fish. Add a few capers, if desired. This sauce can also be used on boiled fish.

Diet for Thursday.

Breakfast—Half a washed canned pear (fresh, if in season), one egg, one slice gluten toast and Golden Spread, cup black coffee.

Dinner—Tomato soup, one serving spare ribs and sauergraut, lettuce and cucumber salad with mineral oil dressing, D-Zerta (sugar-free gelatin dessert can be purchased by that name at the grocery), black coffee.

English Child Expert Finds Youth In America Spoiled and Restless

Miss Russell Lays Blame on Poor Discipline Parents Keep.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

NORMAL and simple family life that gives a sense of security is the best contribution a very young child can receive, concludes Miss Margaret Russell, after studying nursery schools here, in Eangland and in Scotland.

Miss Russell, who lives in Edinburgh, came to Washington from Massachusetts where she studied in the nursery school under Dr. Miriam Van Waters, superintendent of the Massachusetts Woman's Reformatory. Further study and observations were made in nursery schools in New York City and in the Capital. Before coming to America last September, Miss Russell taught in Edinburgh University Settlement Nursery School.

"Small American children seem more restless, more groping and less stable than our English children," she said. "They are bored and exacting in things that should delight them."

For instance, she pointed out that small American children eating in restaurants appeared bored, whereas an English child under similar circumstances would be keenly interested in everything about him. Mothers also seem to have the same disinterested air.

Home Life Unsettled.

All this Miss Russell attributes to unsettled conditions of American home life. She said: "Fathers and mothers feel insecure. So many changes are made economically and morally that they themselves are still floundering. Soon this uncertain feeling is transmitted to their children, regardless of age. Parents feel they must go out nearly every evening for amusement instead of finding pleasure in the home with the children.

"Greater interest in domestic activities, with home as a career rather than a side stop for women would make for greater stability. Due to the fact that most English women's work is limited to the home and charity, their children receive more personal attention and their home life is more normal. They seldom leave the home at evening. The whole tempo of life is slower and more normal than I have found here."

Too much emphasis on books and education and too little reliance on natural instincts and love, according to Miss Russell, creates imaginary problems for American parents and teachers in their relationship with small children.

"From all that I have observed since coming to America," explained the visiting Scotchwoman, "it seems to me that both mothers and teachers depend too much upon books that fill them with conflicting theories. Hence, each habit, each movement of the child is so closely watched that every instinct becomes a ground for fear. They are so anxiously looking for a problem in the child that each move becomes exaggerated into a psychological or psychiatric puzzle." Many nursery school teachers in the United States are too bored with living or with their jobs as teachers, Miss Russell believes. They do not have a feeling of joyous living, she said. And unless they are happy they cannot make their small charges happy, for children sense the discontent and in turn become restless and dissatisfied.

"As a whole, nursery school teachers over here are too serious in their work," she declared. "By that I mean they fail to display a sense of humor in dealing with the children. All is dead seriousness. Instead of reprimanding the children for mistakes in a grave tone more could be accomplished by a little good nature."

A level-headed nurse of the old-fashioned mammy type, suggested Miss Russell, who would exercise both love and discipline in controlling the small child would do much to banish the helpless, unloved, insecure feeling of the American child.

English nursery schools: Are designed for the underprivileged; emphasize health; enforce strict discipline; have few if any psychological or psychiatry problems; impart security and stabilized feeling; normalize the life of the children in a natural, homelike atmosphere.

To Continue Studies.

American nursery schools: Are planned for the privileged class; stress psychological theories; are slack in discipline; lack stabilization (due to uncertain financial support); have a too serious atmosphere; have many so-called problem children; have individualistic and spoiled children.

Particularly eager to continue her studies of the rich American child of the nursery school age, Miss Russell plans to spend the summer in an exclusive child's camp.

"Do you consider the wealthy American child spoiled and undisciplined?" she was asked.

"Yes," she replied. "I find the privileged child greatly spoiled. He is a rugged individualist, demanding his own way and the fulfillment of his own desires. Even those of the upper middle class are spoiled. This, of course, makes it much more difficult to work with them, for they do not know how to co-operate and to get along with other people."

"Too many American mothers spoil their children by inconsistent discipline," says Miss Margaret Russell, of Edinburgh, who has spent the last three weeks in Washington observing nursery schools and sight-seeing. For all disciplinary problems she advises a sense of humor.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

It's Possible to Diet and Like It if You Choose Calories Well.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE WAY TO DIET and like it is to diet on the foods you like. You can be on a diet and have cream in your coffee, a juicy steak, and even an occasional piece of apple pie. Your limit is only in calories, and the trick is to juggle these little food units to include some of the foods you like best, for variety is the life of your diet.

After living on such dietary twosomes as spinach and lamb chop or tomato and egg for a few days you will relish them about as much as bread and water. You will know exactly how Robert Benchley felt when he announced that he was "definitely off bananas." Mr. Benchley went on a banana and skim milk diet and was licked from the beginning, because he did not like bananas.

Trying desperately for variety, Mr. Benchley cut the bananas up into cubes, flavored them with Worcestershire, and finally mashed them up with milk in a cocktail shaker and gave himself "quite a party." The upshot of all this was that on the third morning he was driven back to a good, solid breakfast. He had ham and eggs, wheatcakes, coffee with cream, and even inquired about the roast pork from the night before.

That one experience accounts for a lot of the humor in Mr. Benchley's book, "My Ten Years in a Quandary."

The only thing wrong with the banana and milk diet is its monotony—which is sometimes enough. It is the one balanced restricted diet and you can follow it without impairing your health. If you want it, here it is: Four to six bananas a day along with three to four glasses of skim milk. To this should be added about 50 calories in chopped cabbage or lettuce.

Any diet is difficult, but it is impossible when you do not like the foods you are getting. My idea is that if you do not like spinach, don't eat it. If you want cream in your coffee, have it. The difference between a reducing diet and your regular menus is achieved by cutting calories here and there where they are the least missed. The good solid foods which the average person likes are the ones he must have on his diet: Meat, eggs, cheese, milk, potatoes, vegetables and fruits. There is nothing monotonous about that list!

To make reducing easy you must watch the little things such as salt, sugar, water at mealtime, bunmunching and midnight snacks. An excess of salt is a hindrance to weight loss; more than one glass of liquid with the meals stretches the tummy and therefore the appetite; sugar ruins the taste for plain food and munching on rolls before the meal is a high calorie habit. Eat your meals . . . don't diet and then eat between meals.

A 1,200-calorie balanced daily diet can contain the foods you really like. The main thing about a diet is that you must be able to follow it, and these menus may be followed until you are down to normal weight.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 29.

ONCE IN a while we reporters, fashion-snoopers and other dismal fauna have a party that isn't concerned with introducing a new line of clothes, juice squeezer or bra. Occasionally we have a get-together eat-and-talk-fest that is really a gathering of friends to greet a friend, and that happened to my little crowd (from 10 to 1,000) a few nights ago.

JOHN and ALICE HUGHES

Fred, the master-milliners, threw a nice party to greet Mme. Helene Lyolene, who has just designed the 'jeune fille" line of spring duds for the house of Helm in Paris. Our gang loves Helene, who is a little Russian, robbed of country and parents by the revolution of '17, and who has just suffered a fresh tragedy through the death of her only son, fighting with the Loyalist army in Spain. Lyolene, though, is a brave spirit and has come to town for a brief visit with ther local pals —of whom I'm certainly one.

That's why the John-Fred party was so happy. About 100 of us mingled from 7 to 1 in the morning—all friends, and even comrades. Some of us ate a big chicken dinner, and after that some drank (the beasts!) and some ate snacks, and we all talked. Fanny Arms, of Cleveland, and her sister from Chicago were there, and Marion Stephenson, my little camera-friend, after an 8,000-mile motor trip through the Nation, and Lilly Dache, ace hatmaker, and Do Partridge, of "Stage," and a couple of countesses and baronesses who toil in local store, and scores more. It was a real, lovely, homey party in the heart of New York and warmed the gizzard!

Incidentally, if you want to see an historic New York house and restaurant in one, visit the place where this reunion was held. It's called "The Little Mansion House," is at 61 East Fifty-second street and is run by Miss Gladys Caton Wilcock. Once the house was owned and lived in by Benjamin Wood, of a famed Gotham family. It's a lovely spot and you'll get as fine a Southern meal as the town affords. It looks still like what it once was—the home of a New York gemp'mum of the old school. And, as I say, the grub is gudgeous.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Princess Ethel Barrymore has just made her second stage appearance of the year in town. She retired, you remember, last season. A couple of ha-has, for such an old trouper can no more retire than could Bernhardt or Adelina Patti. Ethel is now in her late fifties, and what is she playing now? Why, Granny Whiteoaks at the age of 101—Granny being the creation of Mazo de la Roche in the fine "Whiteoaks of Jalna" series. Even in the role, Princess Ethel doesn't look an hour over 92!

* * * *

You know me. I don't hang around bars, but I did go to the opening of Jack Dempsey's new saloon on Broadway, about Fiftieth street. Jack's new place is very fancy and chromium. But I looked in vain for Hannah Williams Dempsey, his pretty little wife. No doubt she was at home taking care of the two Dempsey kidlets—which is just what makes the old champ happy! He doesn't want her around saloons, or theaters, either. Just like my old-fashioned gentleman at home.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

'Some Cute Little Blouses'

All your friends had been urging you to get a suit. "Why don't you ever wear suits?" they kept asking.

You couldn't answer them. You know you had some vague subconscious antipathy to suits, but you couldn't put your finger on it.

You were the perfect suit type, your friends persisted. And suits were so youthful . . . and smart . . . and several cute little blouses would see you through the season. Besides men, as a rule, preferred women in suits——

As you start downtown a week later you take a satisfied look at your handsome new suit hanging in your clothes closet. It's simple. And black. You will have no trouble getting blouses. You will get a dusty pink to start with—you've always wanted to wear dusty pink—and probably a little white crepe, and maybe a poudre blue.

At the first store you confront cases and counters filled with luscious pink blouses. Every conceivable shade. You ask for a dusty pink crepe "not too dressy." The clerk brings a light red clay. You hold it to your face . . . are transformed into an unwashed gypsy. She brings a pale canned salmon effect. You hold it up . . . become stricken with the jaundice. She brings scads of others ranging from delicate blush to deepest rose. Yet all "dusty pink." At last you find your color, the one that, as she says, "does something" for you. But—the blouse has an outside basque effect and a collar that makes you look like your grandmother.

* * * *

You continue your search at other stores. You find the right color, but not in the style you want. You find the style, but with the wrong color. You find both color and style and they haven't it in your size.

You see exquisite pink crepe blouses on the smart mannikins in the windows. But you try on similar ones and become as dressed up as your washwoman bound for a lodge meeting. What is wrong with you, anyway? Other people wear pink frills and get away with them.

Ah, you have it! You will get a pink linen! Handkerchief linen! It's softer. And such blouses are so cool and simple. And probably cheap. You will pick up maybe half a dozen of different colors if you find any bargains.

* * * *

You eat your lunch and start a second round of the stores. At two stores they tell you the handkerchief linens aren't in yet. But they have some lovely heavy linen "Gibson Girls" with long sleeves . . .

No, you will try elsewhere. You dash to another store, and to your joy find a counter piled with handkerchief linen blouses—at $1.95 each. Yau paw through the piles trying to find your color. The clerk brings you the right shade in a heavy linen with a long outside tail. You can easily tuck in the tail, she assures you. You think of your figure with such a pad over the stomach and wave it away.

"There will be lots of other dusty pink blouses in?" you ask hopefully.

"I don't know," says the clerk. "You can't tell about blouses . . . they're always grabbed up so fast."

Finally in the higher-priced department of another store you discover a blouse that seems to have some affinity for you. It is pink—of a subtle quality. It has simplicity, even smartness. You look at the price tag and gasp. You will not pay that for one blouse, much less a handkerchief linen one!

You try one more store. Ah, luck is with you! Here at last is a nice little blouse in a pink that will do, in a style that seems engaging.

* * * *

At home you try it on with your suit, go to the morror. But . . . something is wrong. Too tight in the back, too big in the neck. You look blah and dishwatery.

The next day you take it back, buy the more expensive pink linen. Next week you will give over to hunting a white crepe, the next to rounding up a poudre blue.

Ah—you suddenly remember! You know now why you have never liked suits!

Prizes Are Offered For New Recipes Using Ice Cream

It's time to try out new recipes for ice cream. The market now offers many fresh fruits for making delightful concoctions. There are crushed strawberry ice cream, cool peppermint stick candy mousses and luscious frozen peanut cream that should be made in double portions.

There are dozens of ways in which to vary the routine dish. Recipes for making them are varied to meet the individual requirement. If they are to be frozen in the tray of the automatic refrigerator then special precautions must be taken to see that the dessert remains smooth and creamy. Whipped cream, gelatin, marshmallow or whipped evaporated milk must be used to form the basis for their smoothness. If they are made in the hand-turned freezer another recipe should be selected. The flavor of the cream is important.

Five cash prizes are offered this week to winners of the contest. The first is $3, the second $2 and there are three prizes of $1 each. Winning recipes should include directions for preparation. If you gain compliments when you serve your desserts then you should certainly enter this contest.

The deadline for entering recipes is April 2. Choose your most popular recipe and mail to Jean Green, Post food editor.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

HERE'S a captivating frock for your little girl's spring and summer wardrobe . . . a Claire Tilden easy-to-make frock that offers two interesting versions. And when mother orders Pattern 554, and finds out how easy it is to follow—she'll want to run up both styles in bright cotton prints. Princess lines, puffed sleeves, and trim, pointed collar are classic in their youthful flattery—and for a bit of dash these frocks may be finished off with horizontal splashes of contrasting ric-rac, braid, or ribbon. For fabrics, choose easy-to-launder cotton challis, percale, or chambray. Detailed sewing guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 554 is cut in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2½ yards 36-inch fabric and ⅝ yard ric-rac.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number

ITALIAN DESSERT

Salt
6 tablespoonfuls sherry flavoring
3 tablespoonfuls confectioners' sugar

Beat eggs until light and lemon-colored. Add sugar. Place in double boiler over hot water. Beat with rotary beater. Add sherry flavoring, drop by drop, beating all the while until all the sherry is used and the mixture is thick and fluffy. Pile in warmed sherbet glasses. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Serve hot.

To save time in sewing on buttons and to prevent the thread from breaking, put two strands of thread through the eye of the needle; thus sewing with four strands instead of the usual two.

Courtesy Ends With Mother, Is Bad Motto

Families Often Polite to Others But Omit Mistress of Home.

By Margaret Wallace.

THE MOTHER of a family deserves and has a right to demand politeness from all the other members of the family. Yet how often do sons, daughters and husbands forget the little courtesies to the housewife and mother which they accord to the outside world. One mother has a complaint which may be typical.

"My sons and daughters pride themselves on their good manners," she writes, "and always are on time for their engagements and never fail to express appreciation of courtesies rendered to them by strangers. But they come to their meals at home a half or even an hour late and do not apologize. They seem to think that because it is home, meals can wait for them or they can have special meals served. As we have only one maid, I often have to serve these meals myself and even reheat them, as I do not want them to eat cold food. Recently my son and daughter came in an hour late for their dinner. I had started to write letters in the living room and yet they called to me that they were hungry and would I hurry with their dinner. For the sake of peace and because I was afraid that their father would scold them I gave them their dinner. They hurried from the table without a word of thanks. I have always tried to teach them to be polite, but they do not seem to think it is necessary to be polite to me."

Routine Precatory.

This, of course, is more than a case of bad manners on the part of this woman's son and daughter; it is gross lack of consideration and gratitude. It is as rude for sons and daughters or husbands or any member of the family to be late to the family meals without excuse as it would be for them to be late for a social function. While the mother is the housewife and therefore the hostess, she should be accorded every courtesy. This mother, of course, makes a mistake by catering to her children's lack of manners and consideration.

Another mother writes: "My daughter and my husband never say good morning to me or greet me when they return from work in the evening. They are not unkind to me and even bring me presents and provide a nice home and a maid for me. But they lack the little politenesses toward me I feel I have a right to expect. My daughter invites people to tea at the house without telling me about it and never invites me to meet her friends."

Well-bred families always say good morning and greet each other when they return from work or other pursuits in the evening. It is not good form for a daughter of the house to invite guests to tea without informing her mother. While the wise mother will efface herself when her daughter is entertaining her young friends, she should greet the guests when they arrive.

Improve Your Pronunciation

For just a minute Marian's heard herself as others hear her—and what a jolt that is!

"Such a treat!" she said to her new beau. "The incomPARable Leda in 'ROWT to St. Helena!'" Then the attractive girl near her said, "So we've the inCOMparable Leda in 'ROOT to St. Helena!'" —and Marian knew her slipshod pronunciation had betrayed her again.

Why do the Marians do it? Why do they risk looking stupid and uneducated to the people they admire when there's a quick, simple way to learn to talk correctly?

That way is to check on the words you're most likely to mispronounce. And since there aren't so many of those jawbreakers as you'd think, in no time you can zip through the whole list.

What words are apt to trip you when you read the news with Tom? Do you say prope-a-Gan-da for propaganda? Do you garble sinecure and incognito into SINecure and incogNEEtoe? PropaGANDA, SIGH necure and inKOGnito are correct—and easy to say—when you know.

And the tricky words likely to pop up in general talk! Do you order CHAWKlut blank mahnge, would you adore to go to MEAHMe?

Easy to avoid these pitfalls when you've read in your danger list that chocolate blancmange is CHOCKolat blahMAHNZ, Miami is MYAMi.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

When the Normandie pulled into pier yesterday, she brought three passengers of keen interest to Washington; former President Hoover, former Rumanian Minister Charles A. Davila, around whom numerous rumors are circulating, and Mlle. Nadia Boulanger, noted French composer, conductor and teacher, who will be in Washington this week-end.

Shortly after her arrival in New York, Mlle. Boulanger was off to Boston, where she had been residing since January while teaching and lecturing in Radcliffe. Recently she returned home to attend memorial services for her sister, Mlle. Lili Boulanger, who died 20 years ago.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Early this year when she came over from Paris on her third visit to the United States, she went to Boston to conduct two performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra—she is the only woman ever to be accorded this honor—and stayed to teach at Radcliffe.

During her sojourn in this country she has made several visits to Washington, and March 6 she and her singers gave a concert at the Sulgrave Club, under the patronage of Mrs. Roosevelt and the French Ambassador, Count Doynel de Saint-Quentin.

To Be Guest of Mrs. Robert W. Bliss

At that time many friends and admirers urged her to come back, so she will return Friday. She will be the house guest of Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss that night and the following night will be with Mrs. Winthrop Chanler.

Accompanying her to Washington will be three members of her ensemble of singers. Mme. Gisele Peyron will be the house guest of Mrs. Walter Hilton, and the other two—Hughues Cuenod and Doda Conrad—will stay at the Washington College of Music, where Sunday evening Mlle. Boulanger will lecture on the works of her friend, Igor Stravinsky, the composer. Also Sunday and Monday morning she will conduct classes at the College of Music, and Monday afternoon she will be off to Philadelphia.

According to present plans, she will continue her classes at Radcliffe until June and then return to France to resume her regular summer classes at the American Conservatory, in Fontainebleau. This school will probably have pupils from Washington this summer.

Miss Lya Florescu At Rumanian Legation

While nobody seems to know whether Charles Davila has come back to America to marry or to enter business, the rumor persists that he will wed shortly Mrs. Edythe Sterling Hammond, who recently was divorced from Ogden Hammond, jr., son of the former Ambassador to Spain. Anyway, since Mr. Davila left Washington a few months ago, the Rumanian Legation has virtually been closed. Now, however, an attractive Rumanian visitor is there. She is Miss Lya Florescu, cousin of Radu Florescu, who formerly was counselor of the legation and is now in the foreign office in Bucharest. Since childhood she has been a friend of George Duca, of the legation staff, and he obtained permission for her to stay there. She plans to remain until the minister arrives and then move over to the Wardman Park, where she will be the house guest of Miss Sibilla Skidelsky.

Miss Florescu seems a most interesting young woman. She has traveled widely, visited America before . . . has a degree in economics from the University of Bucharest . . . and also has studied in Paris.

HERE AND THERE: Mrs. Robert Low Bacon left last night for Oyster Bay, Long Island, where this afternoon she will speak before the Edith Kermit Roosevelt Women's Republican Club on "The Legislative Situation in Washington." She will return tonight . . . Dr. and Mrs. Charles Augustus Simpson have returned to their apartment, at 2101 Connecticut avenue, after a cruise to Cuba, Panama and Mexico and a ten-day stay in Long Beach, Calif. . . . Mrs. Merriam Curtis, who is in New York, is planning to spend part of the spring season at Willowmere, her home in Roslyn, Long Island . . . Miss Patricia Eleanor Paine, daughter of Mrs. Whiting Paine, of Miami and Cleveland, has returned to her studies at the King-Smith Studio School after a short visit with her mother in Miami . . . Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Evalyn McLean, and the Misses Ann Carrol and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem will return to Washington Saturday. By way of rounding out their two months' sojourn in Palm Beach, the girls have recently been enjoying several days of deep-sea fishing.

Mrs. Seavey Hostess For Luncheon Today

Mrs. Clyde L. Seavey will entertain at luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel today. Her guests will be Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, Mrs. Albert E. Carter, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Mrs. Frank McNinch, Mrs. Claude L. Draper, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. John W. Scott and Mrs. Marion Caskie.

Also Mrs. Howard Snyder, Mrs. Francis L. McFarren, Mrs. Laura A. Bradley, Mrs. John E. Benton, Mrs. Harold C. Bryant, Mrs. Willard E. Givens, Mrs. Edmund S. Kochersperger, Mrs. H. L. Lindsays Fete S. J. Meyricks

An "all-Navy" dinner took place at the British Embassy last evening when the Ambassador and Lady Lindsay entertained in honor of Vice Admiral S. J. Meyrick, of H. M. S. York, ad Mrs. Meyricks. The Mayricks are staying at the embassy until Saturday, when the York leaves for the West Coast.

Mrs. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was present last evening, as were the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison. Others there were the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy; Admiral Hugh Rodman, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles E. Courtney, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Andrews and Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb.

Also Mrs. Albert Parker Niblack, Sir William and Lady Max-Muller, Capt. and Mrs. John R. Beardall, Capt. H. E. Morse, Commander and Mrs. Harold J. Nelson, Commander and Mrs. William S. Popham, Capt. and Mrs. F. C. Bradley, Group Capt. and Mrs. C. C. Pirie, Lieut. and Mrs. William L. Freseman, Commander G. D. Belben, Commander and Mrs. F. J. A. Coleby, Commander R. H. Pearce and Lieut. J. S. H. Lawrence

Fahnestocks Give Small Luncheon For Lady Milton

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock entertained at a small informal luncheon yesterday in honor of Lady Milton, who is visiting her brother, Benjamin Plunket, of the British Embassy. The luncheon took place at the Fahnestock's residence on Q street.

Besides Lady Milton and her brother, guests included the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims; George Duca, of the Rumanian legation; Mrs. Robert Joyce, Mrs. Granger Blair, Clarence Hewes, and Mr. and Mrs. James Ripley, of New York, who are spending several days here.

Mr. and Mrs. Fahnestock have selected Saturday evening, May 14, as the date for the coming out party of the former's daughter, Miss Fontaine Fahnestock, who will be feted at a dance at their residence. Miss Fahnestock will arrive here early in May from her school in Brussels.

Many Reservations Made for Lectures

Mme. Hirosi Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, has made reservations for the series of afternoon talks to be given by Henry Gregor, beginning Monday, April 4, at 3:30 o'clock at the Phillips Memorial Gallery. Mr. Gregor already has started a group of Tuesday evening lectures at the Gallery.

Others who have made reservations for the afternoon series are Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Baroness Serge Korff, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Irving, Mr. and Mrs. St. Pierre Gaillard and Dr. and Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller.

Also Dr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Groover, Mrs. Henry S. Dimock, Edward Potter, Miss Julia Schelling, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Howes, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop and Miss Charlotte Klein.

The afternoon talks, which are sponsored by the Washington Junior League, will be on the subject of "Modern Music: Its Aims and Tendencies," and includes six lectures.

Mrs. Gregor will arrive in Washington tomorrow night from Miami, Fla., where they have a villa, Sweet May. Mr. Gregor is a member of the faculty of Miami University, and both he and Mrs. Gregor have been playing regularly in the second violin section of the Miami Symphony Orchestra this past winter. She is the former Mrs. Hiram Bingham.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin and Princess Marie de Sayn Witgenstein, who is visiting her, will leave tomorrow for a trip to Virginia, as the princess, whose home is in Poland, is anxious to see something of the surrounding countryside.

Mrs. Goodwin and her friend will stop at Westover, the famous estate on the James River, owned by Richard Crane, and from there will go to Virginia Beach for the week-end.

Returning to Washington, Princess Wittgenstein will remain with Judge and Mrs. Goodwin for an indefinite time.

Tuckermans Give Second Dinner for Madame Grouitch

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman last evening gave the second of their dinners in honor of Mme Grouitch, widow of the former Yugoslavian minister to the United States. There were 14 present with Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg as the ranking guests.

Madame Grouitch is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman at Tuxeden, their home in Edgemoor. She was feted by them at dinner on Monday evening, also, when Mme. Constantin Fotitch, wife of the present Yugoslavian Minister, was the ranking guest.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHILE THE pink-cheeked officers of the visiting H. M. S. York dash frenziedly about to teas, the sailors from the British flagship also are going in for teas—only the kind they favor have an "e" at the end and are preceded by the word "strip." The downtown section of Washington, especially Ninth street, is overflowing these evenings with the blue-coated British tars, who pop merrily in and out of movies, cafeterias and barrooms, to say nothing of Jimmie Lake's establishment.

DUDLEY HARMON.

To get back to the officers, however, they are as attractive a lot of bachelors (albeit some of them are just temporarily single) to have descended on Washington in ages. At cocktail parties they display a cheery, friendly manner no doubt acquired from attending hundreds of such functions whenever the ship puts in at Newport, Bar Harbor, or any of its other numerous ports of call.

Several of the officers confessed the other day that while they liked Washington, the weather was making them "shivuh"—after Bermuda and the West Indies, whence they have just come.

WITH WASHINGTON society showing itself crazy for musicales during the past few weeks, it was surprising to find nary a member of it at the moving performance on Monday night at the Cathedral of Bach's Passion according to St. Matthew. The place was jammed, the singing magnificent, but not one of those who skip so blithely from Capital musicale to another were there to hear it.

GLEANED from here or there: Manuel Trucco, for five years Chilean Ambassador here, is returning to Chile next fall. Whether or not he will come back to Washington is problematical, as his country has had a change of presidents and he is a political appointee, not a career diplomat . . . Prince del Drago, first secretary of the Italian Embassy, has already completed his plans for the summer. He is sailing for Italy in June . . . Benedetto Campomazza, also of the embassy, will be much missed when he leaves for New York on Friday, thence to sail for Italy on Saturday on the Conte di Savoia. He will spend a month with his family and another month traveling on the Continent, returning to Washington in June . . . Mrs. S. Kent Legare, who has been in Rome, visiting our Counselor of Embassy and Mrs. Edward Reed, will return shortly after Easter . . . Senora de Huneeus will depart soon to spend several weeks in Mexico. Her husband was recently promoted from First Secretary to Counselor of the Chilean Embassy . . . Decio de Moura, of the Brazilian Embassy, will be transferred in two months. He is giving a cocktail party tomorrow.

SO ALEXANDER KIRK has been named Counselor of the United States Embassy in Moscow! We won't believe he's actually going there until he's on his way, as for the past year Kirk has been successively named to one post after another only to be switched before he got there. Last summer he came to Washington en route to Singapore, only to have it changed to Barcelona. He was reported unenthusiastic about both places.

The Soviet capital will no doubt offer a great contrast to Kirk's magnificent villa in Rome, where he served for a number of years as counselor of our embassy. His house in Washington he has rented to a succession of people with the wherewithal to maintain its lovely gardens and swimming pool. Located in Georgetown, on the site of the old Dumbarton Tennis Club, it has many rooms, few windows, as Kirk, for some reason, dislikes the latter.

CANFIELD HIMES, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes, has blazed the trail for men who don't like the 1938 version of women's hats. When his sister Marilyn's birthday fell due recently, he took his hard-earned money and went out and bought her for a present a bonnet—a simple sports hat, with no veils or other trimming attached.

Fetes Continue For Schlatters

When Ernest Schlatter, retiring Attache of the Swiss Legation, and Mme. Schlatter sail for Europe on April 16, the latter's sister, Miss Olga Patterson, will go with them, to spend some time at the Schlatters' new post in Brussels.

In the meantime the diplomat and his wife are still being feted all over town, with Forrester Davison entertaining for them at a tea yesterday afternoon. Among the guests were Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, wife of the Counselor of The Netherlands Legation; Mme. L. A. H. Peters, wife of The Netherlands Agricultural Attache; Joao de Deus Ramos, Secretary of the Portuguese Legation; Ditley Knudsen, Attache of the Norwegian Legation, and Lieut. Forrest Close, who will leave April 13 for Arizona.

Also present were Miss Fina Tudela, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mme. Lya Florescu; J. M. K. Vyvyan, who will be in Washington for two more months; Alexander White, Miss Evelyn Walker, Miss Rebecca Trucco, Carl Wastfelt, Attache of the Swedish Legation, and Mrs. Enid Sims Snow.

Alfred J. Toulons Give Dinner for Daughter Friday

A rehersal dinner for Miss Dorothy Toulon, her fiance Lieut. Jerome Frost Smith, U. S. N., and members of their wedding party will be given Friday evening by the bride-elect's parents, Capt. and Mrs. Alfred J. Toulon Medical Corps, U. S. N., at their home at the Navy Yard. Miss Toulon and Lieut. Smith will be married Saturday evening at Fort Myer Chapel.

Miss Hope Toulon, who will be her sister's maid of honor, will arrive Friday from William and Mary College in Williamsburg, where she is a student. She will be accompanied by Miss Kitty Smoot, who will be one of the bridesmaids, and Miss Mannie Smoot.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Wheelock, of Swarthmore, Pa., will also attend the rehearsal dinner.

Helen Wilson Becomes Bride Of R. E. J. Grosfils, of London

Ceremony in Memorial Chapel at Army Medical Center; Couple Off for Vancouver to Sail for Home in Japan.

Wearing her mother's wedding dress, Miss Helen Marie Wilson yesterday afternoon became the bride of Rene Edmund Joseph Grosfils. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock, in the Memorial Chapel of the Army Medical Center and was attended by both Washington and out-of-town friends of the couple.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Pegram Wilson, of this city, and the late Maj. Wilson, Ordnance Department, U. S. A. Mr. Grosfils is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Hardy, of London, England, who came to this city to attend the wedding. Chaplain A. C. Oliver, jr., officiated.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Daniel A. Wilson, Cape Cod, Mass., the bride was attired in ivory duchess satin trimmed with duchess lace, and her veil was of filmy, graceful tulle. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Paulson Is Matron of Honor

Her matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. Lynn C. Paulson, the former Miss Emma Louise Danielson, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Wilmott Danielson, at whose wedding last year the bride of yesterday's ceremony served as only attendant. Mrs. Paulson was gowned in cornflower blue chiffon and wore a wreath of blue camellias from which was draped a blue tulle veil. She carried pink snapdragons.

Lieut. Robert P. Wilson, brother of the bride, served as best man, while the ushers were Walter K. Le Count, Lynn C. Paulson, Lieut. Pierre V. Kieffler, jr., and Richmond Chambers.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper took place at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest for the bridal party, relatives and out-of-town guests. The mother of the bride was gowned in pale gray marechalisette over lavender and wore a large black hat. Her corsage was of orchids. Mrs. Grosfils, mother of the bridegroom, was in black broderie anglaise over satin with touches of soft blue at the neck and sleeves. Her shoulder corsage was of sweetheart roses.

Will Live in Kobe, Japan

When the couple left for Vancouver, where they will sail for Japan and their future home in Kobe, Mrs. Rene Edmund Grosfils was wearing a slate-blue three-piece wool suit, trimmed in gray Persian lamb. Her accessories were of navy blue.

The bride is a graduate of Michigan State College and a member of Alpha Phi Sorority. The bridegroom studied at Vevey College in Switzerland and at Milton Abbas in Dorset, England.

Among out-of-town guests were Maurice C. Piatt, of Detroit, Mich.; Miss Jane Piatt and Mrs. R. E. Olds Anderson, of Lansing, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gregory and William H. Ingersoll, of Maplewood, N. J.; Charles H. Ingersoll, of New York; Mrs. A. C. Allison, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. L. U. Roth, Mrs. Brigham, Miss Katherine Roth and Morrison Roth, of Hamilton, N. Y.

Mrs. Wade Ellis Fetes Visitor

Gardening was chief topic of talk yesterday at Mrs. Wade H. Ellis' luncheon in the ballroom of the Sulgrave Club. Guest of honor was Mrs. Tracy Guthrie, of Sewickley, Pa., a member of the Allegheny County Garden Club, who is visiting Mrs. Ellis.

A huge bowl of spring blossoms centered the table, at which covers were laid for over 30 guests. The company included members of the Alexandria Garden Club, to which Mrs. Ellis belongs; Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, of Middleburg, president of the Garden Club of Virginia; Mrs. Robert B. 400 Women Of Md. Clubs Visit Here

Mrs. Tydings Is Guide and Honor Guest of Pilgrimage.

Group Is Received by Mrs. Lawson at Headquarters.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Alarm clocks along the Eastern Shore of Maryland were set at 4 a. m. yesterday so 400 club women of that district could gather for a pilgrimage to Washington. They came in 12 buses and 15 motor cars, with police escort.

Mrs. Harry L. Harcum, of Salisbury, president of the district, and candidate for president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, headed the delegation, and Mrs. Thalia Woods, secretary to Mrs. Roberta Campbell, Lawson, president of the General Federation, was responsible for working out the itinerary for the visitors.

They met at Matapeake ferry and from Annapolis to the District line had a Maryland State police escort. When they entered the District local police took charge of the caravan and piloted it over the city.

Mrs. Tydings Joins Visiting Delegation

The women first visited the White House, where Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of Senator Tydings, greeted them and joined their party. When Mrs. Tydings first heard a group of Maryland clubwomen was coming to Washington, she made plans to invite them to luncheon at her home, but when she learned there were over 400 of them, she accepted their invitation to dine with them instead, in the auditorium of the National Press Club. She and Mrs. George W. Morey, of Chevy Chase, president of the Montgomery Federation, were guests of honor.

From there they were taken around the Tidal Basin and to Hains Point to see the cherry blossoms and then to the General Federation headquarters, where Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Tydings and Mrs. Harcum received them in the drawing room on the second floor.

Mrs. Lawson wore a wine-red crepe dress trimmed with an appliqued design of satin in the same shade. Mrs. Tydings was in a short black jacket, and black skirt with white hair-line stripes, and wore a silver fox scarf, a sailor hat with a white straw brim, black taffeta crown and gay little bouquet of flowers in front, and a vail drawn under her chin. Mrs. Harcum was in a gray-blue costume suit with which she wore a blue felt hat.

Headquarters Furnishings Include Club Gifts

The Maryland visitors were greeted as they entered the headquarters by Mrs. Rosa Wilgoose, who welcomed them downstairs and on the second floor, by Miss Lorraine Sternberg and Mrs. Woods. Other members of the staff assisted in conducting them over the house. They saw the Maryland room, furnished by the Maryland clubs, the Oklahoma room, furnished by the clubs of Mrs. Lawson's State, and handsome furnishings upstairs and down, gifts of other individual clubs and State federations throughout the country, including the painting of Mount McKinley, given by the clubs of Alaska, in the reception hall on the second floor.

From federation headquarters, the women were taken, under Mrs. Tydings' leadership, to the Senate and the House, from there to the Supreme Court Building, and then to historic Alva Belmont House, headquarters of the National Woman's Party.

Their pilgrimage was not ended when they left Washington. On their way home, they stopped in Annapolis, where they were received at 6:30 by Gov. and Mrs. Harry Nice at the Executive Mansion.

Club Officers Among Eastern Shore's '400'

Among the women in the party were Mrs. Edgar F. Bradley, of Hurlock, vice president, of the Eastern Shore; Mrs. H. H. Hollis, of Preston; Mrs. Philip S. Richardson, of Hurlock, chairman of education; Mrs. T. J. Caruthers, of Salisbury, chairman of public health; Mrs. Otho McWilliams, chairman of club extension; Mrs. Walter S. Sheppard, of Salisbury, past president of the Eastern Shore district; Miss Myrtle Wright, of Hurlock, chairman of resolutions, and Mrs. Samuel Byrn, of Cambridge, historian.

Club presidents in the delegation were Mrs. W. C. Conover, president of the Cambridge Woman's Club; Mrs. D. W. D[illegible]s, president of the Denton Club, accompanied by her husband, the lone man in the party; Mrs. John M. Elderdice, president of the Wicomico Club of Salisbury; Mrs. Wilmer Fell Davis, president of the Federalsburg Club; Mrs. Sidney Orem, president of the St. Michaels Club; Mrs. Sidney Dixon, of the Elkton Club; Mrs. Blanchefield, of the Chesapeake City Club; Mrs. Archibald Dewing of the Centerville clubs; Mrs. Harry Dashiell, of the Princess Ann Club, and Mrs. Thomas Fleming, president of the Junior Woman's Club of St. Michaels, which was the first to affiliate with the Maryland State Federation. Miss Geraldine Farmer, another junior member from there was also among the vistors.

Miss White Speaks at Y. W. C. A. Professional Women's Banquet

Urges Appreciation of Work of Feminist Pioneers at 'Nation-Wide' Dinner and Candlelight 'Friendship Service.'

An address by Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and a candlelight "friendship service" were features last night of the annual "Nation-wide" banquet of the business women's department of the Y. W. C. A.

Miss White spoke on "The Business Woman's Share in a Democracy," which is the program theme for the business women's departments of the Y. M. C. A. this year throughout the country.

"A good citizen votes, but ballot-casting is not citizenship," she told her audience. "Citizenship is day-to-day living; participation in the affairs of the community and of the Nation and ability to help meet situations which arise. The citizen equal to the situation is hte one who is aware and informed. Action without knowledge," she added, "is dangerous, but knowledge without action is cowardice."

Miss White paid tribute to the courage, dignity and tenacity of Susan B. Anthony and admonished young women to be grateful for what had been won for them by pioneers in the woman's movement. She reminded them that, if they failed to appreciate their heritage enough to defend and uphold it, they would face the likelihood of losing it.

* * * *

The friendship service which is always a part of the annual banquet, but differently observed from year to year, last night was a candlelighting ceremony. During the singing of a Y. W. C. A. song, "The Candles Burn," by Miss Mary Burnett, guests passed the flame from one candle to the next until all were lighted. At the close they joined in singing, "Follow the Gleam."

Messages from Y. W. C. A. groups in 52 other cities had been received, as well as 30 messages from those in other countries. Letters and telegrams from some in this country were read by Miss Marie Higdon and some from abroad, by Miss Nell Shannon. Music for the program was by the Elizabeth Somers Glee Club, directed by Miss Burnett and accompanied by Miss Edith Dawson and there was also group singing for which Miss Catherine Richardson played. Miss Peggy Gragg presided.

Among guests at the banquet were Miss Hettie P. Anderson, general secretary of the local Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Fred E. Wright, chairman of the nominating committee of the national board; Miss Richardson, music chairman for the Blue Triangle Club; Miss Anne Seesholtz, chairman of the local religious life committee; Miss Edith Jay Rieger, executive secretary of the Business Women's Department and Miss Mary Putnam, her assistant; Miss Louise Davidson, second vice president of the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Higdon, secretary of the Xenos Club; Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president of the Washington Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Carmen G. Blough, chairman of Business Women's Department; Mrs. Wilson Compton, first vice president; Miss Virginia Guthrie, of the Xenos Club; Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, of the national board; Mrs. Herbert E. Day, chairman of the local personnel committee; Miss Jessie Smith, of the membership committee; Mrs. William Hurd Hill, of public affairs committee; Miss Mae R. Murray, the department of music chairman; Miss Cecille Protzman, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of the "Y. W."; Miss Dorothy Cain, Amicitia Club president; Miss Jean Carr, Xenos president; Miss Sara Motley, president of the Blue Triangle; Miss Elizabeth Haney and Miss Bertha Pabst, of the department commitee.

Law Sorority To Pledge Nine

Alpha Lambda Chapter, Phi Delta Delta, internatoinal legal fraternity, will hold its tenth annual pledge service Sunday afternoon at the cottage of the Misses Ina Russell and Faye Woodward, at Lake Jackson, Va.

Chaplain Helen Gauker will read the service to nine prospective members, all of whom are students at National University Law School. They are the Misses Florence Benzing, Margaretta Campbell, Burmah Miller, June Scanlon, Lillian Jones, Emily Lee Stewart, Kathryn Masco, Josephine Hutchison and Lucy Anderson. A buffet supper will be served.

Mrs. Julia McNinch Slear, president of Alpha Lambda Chapter, is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Irene Vivian Wright, Sallie Presley, Doris Goodall, Will Nash Campbell and Elisabeth Connor Buchanan.

Alpha Lambda Chapter was installed at the National University Law School July 1, 1928. Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, honorary national president of the fraternity, assisted in the installation ceremonies. Many prominent women lawyers are members of the chapter, among them Mrs. Elizabeth Prender Buchanan, Department of Justice Attorney and author of copyrighted publications on equi'y jurisprudence, negotiable instruments and real property; Mrs. Mabel Benson Sakis, local attorney; Miss Florence Curoe, vice president of the Women's Bar Association; Dr. Jean Stephenson, formerly on the teaching staff at National; Miss Barbara Bartels, attorney in the Internal Revenue Bureau, and Miss Louise Chandler, practicing attorney, who is the youngest woman lawyer in the District to be admitted to practice before the Supreme Court.

In keeping with objectives of the fraternity—to increase the standards of scholarship among women law students and to provide financial aid to deserving applicants—Alpha Lambda Chapter is seeking to establish a scholarship at National University to be awarded each year to a young woman deemed worthy of such assistance. Plans also are being made for presentation of a gold scholarship key annually to an undergraduate student whose scholastic average is outstanding. The scholarship committee is composed of Rosalia Bigos, Cathrine Edmonson and Florence Cc-Louth.

"BREAD AND BUTTER BOOKS" are not necessarily best sellers but are the steady sellers, and the kind from which the author can extract chapters here and there to be rewritten as magazine material.

Marjorie Barstow Greenbie offered this tip to members of the Woman's National Press Club yesterday in an address at its regular Tuesday luncheon. As the author of eight books, including the recently published "Be Your Age," she should know—and the women scribes sat up and took notice of what she said.

Pre-School Round-up Starts May 1

40 Chairmen Arrange for Program at Conference.

Forty summer round-up chairmen from the local parent-teacher associations met yesterday morning at the headquarters of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers in the N. E. A. Building to approve plans made by the advisory committee, of which Mrs. Alma Hudson is chairman. They also received instructions for the round-up which is designed to encourage physical examinations for children who will enter school for the first time next September in an effort to discover remedial defects. The date for its beginning is May 1.

This year the diphtheria immunization and tuberculin tests for pre-school children are being stressed. Parents are to be urged to send their children to their own physicians and dentists but, where this is not possible, group examinations will be arranged by the summer round-up chairmen. Blanks for these examinations are supplied by the Parent-Teacher Associations. When the blanks are returned, the chairmen follow them up, urging parents to have the defects corrected and making a record of what has been done in this direction.

New Committee Functions This Year

The advisory committee, which worked out the tentative plans for this year's project, is functioning for the first time. In former years the Congress has had co-operation from various agencies, but this is the first time their representatives have assisted as an organized committee. The advisory members are Donald Sheehan, of the Tuberculosis Society; Birch Bayh, director of physical education, Board of Education; Dr. Joseph Murphy and Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, of the Health Department; Dr. J. M. McLeod, of the District Medical Society; Dr. Paul Hoffman, of the Dental Society; Miss Gertrude Bowling, of the Instructive Visiting Nurses' Society, and from the Parent-Teacher Congress, Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president; Mrs. P. C. Ellett, Mrs. Lucian Jordan, Mrs. M. J. Henley and Mrs. Hudson.

The dental health project of the Parent-Teacher Congress, another effort to promote the physical well-being of the children, is to be extended this spring to the First and Third Divisions. Dental inspections will be made this morning in Admas, Barnard, Bancroft, Raymond, Takoma and West Schools, starting the program in the Third Division which will continue until pupils in all of the 18 schools have been inspected. By April 8, the project will move to the First Division where the same plan will be carried out. On completion the dental defects of 13,225 children will have been recorded.

Inspections Started In Sixth Division

The dental inspections were instituted in the schools under the auspices of the P.-T. A. last May, beginning with the Sixth Division. Last fall the Fifth and Seventh Divisions were included and the last two are now to be covered, embracing all the elementary schools in Divisions One to Nine.

The Dental Society of the District provides a motion picture and a magic show for the entertainment of the children and to remove their fear of going to the dentist. The children who have had their teeth cared for become members of the "good teeth club" for which they receive a pin. From the Sixth Division last year over 1500 children had dental defects corrected, received lessons in oral hygiene and became members of the club.

Church Federation Ingathering Hears Dr. Russell Clinchy Talk

Mount Pleasant Congregational Church Pastor Speaker at Woman's Council Session; Flower Ceremony Is Held.

Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, was the speaker yesterday at the annual ingathering of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches. The meeting was held at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church South.

Dr. Clinchy, who was introduced by Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, emphasized the signficance of such an interdenominational assembly. Its importance, he said, was not in the fact that members of the group had arbitrarily come together but in the deeper spiritual unity which drew them together despite denominational lines. He also declared that attainment of a solution for individual or world problems could be achieved only by man through divine guidance.

The 18 assistants to the demoninational representatives on the women's council formed a processional in one aisle bringing baskets of spring flowers to the altar as the representatives of the various churches came down another aisle, bringing their membership rolls. The flowers and lists of membership were presented simultaneously to Mrs. William J. Bullis, assistant chairman of denominational representatives. At one side of the chancel stood Miss Etta Mai Russell, Juvenile Court worker, supported by the council, and at the other, Mrs. L. E. Brown, hospital worker of the Federation of Churches. They took the flowers in charge and, immediately after the service, distributed them to the hospitals.

At the close of the flower ceremony, Mrs. William S. Abernethy led the consecration service. The music included an organ prelude by R. Deane Shure and a solo by Mrs. Leo Tooley. The invocation was by the Rev. John W. Ruskin, pastor of Mount Vernon Church, and the benediction by Dr. W. L. Darby executive secretary of the Federation of Churches.

DELICIOUS BREWERY FLAVOR IN EVERY BOTTLE

INSURED BY GUNTHER'S SENSATIONAL DELIVERY PLAN

The Gunther Hostess

KNOCKS IN YOUR BUDGET?

STOP! STOP! STOP! RED LIGHT! BUDGET TROUBLE. Guests from out of town, your turn to entertain the Bridge Club . . . and the shop windows luring you to rival the traditional lily.

Here's a smart new dish, costing next to nothing and all dressed up to the Queen's taste.

LAMB A LA GUNTHER

2 Cups Cooked Lamb
2 Tbsp. Butter
2 Tbsp. Flour
½ Cup Gunther's Dry Beer
1 Cup Brown Stock
NOTE: Undiluted canned Consomme Soup may be used.

METHOD: Melt butter, add flour and mix to a smooth paste with stock. Add cooked lamb cut in cubes and cook 15 minutes. Add Gunther's Dry Beer, salt and pepper to taste. Serve on triangles of toast or on slices of fried eggplant. Piles of fluffy white rice and chow chow mustard pickles will complete a delicious dish, served with GUNTHER'S DRY BEER-Y BEER.

Just one of the large fleet of fast trucks that delivers Gunther's Dry Beer-y Beer to your dealer every day.

As dry and beer-y as any beer you could find in any brewery, anywhere, Gunther's is rushed to your dealer in fast trucks daily.

NOW you can drink Gunther's just as it was brewed for you at the brewery! Here's why Gunther's sensational new daily delivery plan is so vitally important to all lovers of good beer:

First: Light is the enemy of beer. No matter how well it is brewed, beer exposed to light for any length of time, deteriorates rapidly.

Second: Beer ages in the wood. Beer must be aged to be good. But it doesn't age or improve in a bottle! Time gradually destroys its true "brewery flavor" once it has left the wood!

Third: Careless handling hurts beer, too. Carelessly stored, out in the open, or in ordinary warehouses, it is subject to the ravages of temperature, light, and early deterioration.

If there is a product more sensitive, in many ways, than milk, it is beer! And we found that our beer was not always handled properly in the past.

So you see why Gunther's is now delivering beer right from the brewery direct to your dealer in fast trucks daily. It costs us more money. But you get perfect beer in every bottle! Remember, Gunther's is the only "special dry lager" now made in this part of the country.

Other dry lagers, made elsewhere, and shipped here, usually cost at least 3¢ to 5¢ a bottle more than Gunther's. Yet we are sure any expert will agree that no beer at any price is any drier or more beer-y than Gunther's! Gunther's owes much of its dry beeriness to an unusually high percentage of choice Bohemian hops . . . a flavor that domestic hops, alone, will not duplicate.

The next time you order beer, try Gunther's, and you'll be amazed at the difference the dry, beer-y "brewery flavor" makes! And, once you've tasted Gunther's, it won't be any surprise to you at all when we tell you that Gunther's is far and away the biggest selling beer in the combined Washington and Baltimore market!

SPECIAL NOTICE

Virtually all drivers, salesmen, clerks, etc., connected with our Washington business are regular residents of Washington. And all drivers are Union Members.

Gunther Brewing Co., Inc., Baltimore, Md.

Gunther's dry, beer-y flavor is the outstanding choice for buffet dinners . . . it's never sweet or heavy.

Over the Coffee

For the sentimentalists there's a bit of a lump in the throat when a defeated Senator, one of the great ones of bygone days, returns to the Senate floor to revisit the scenes of half-forgotten glory . . . He strolls in a little uncertainly, peers about, perhaps shakes a hand or two, and sits down on one of the big brown couches at the rear wall of the chamber.

If you call McKellar, of Tennessee, the typical Southern Senator, you use the word "typical" in the sense of "symbolic." Few of his colleagues reach his degree of Southernness . . . As a Democrat he might be expected to shine as a handmaiden of the more abundant life . . . Actually he is more reactionary than Hale or Lodge of the New England tradition and the President's loyal opposition . . . By comparison, McNary and Bridges are progressive . . .

Long experience with less crafty men has given him an adequate appreciation of his own shrewdness . . . He peers about him, over or under his specs, with an expression of almost supernal guile.

If he asks you to pass the butter, he does it as if he were outfoxing you in a parliamentary bout of wits . . . He has probably crippled more New Deal legislation than all 18 Republican Senators combined . . . Personally, he is the lovable-old-gentleman-out-of-Dickens type, with just a touch of Pickwickian arrogance.

* * * *

GILT OFF THE DOME: Several Congressmen think that aristocratic Jim Wadsworth's speech for the Navy bill is the best speech made in the House this year . . . Chockful of modesty, patriotism and foreboding . . . Except for White House functions and the McNutt-for-President shindig, the Senator Vandenbergs' musicale, featuring their talented daughter, was the most scrumptious party of the year by an American statesman . . . Pennsylvania's Guffey was the only enthusiastic eater from the Senate to rate an invitation to Col. Schiffeler's dinner of epicures at the Raleigh. Louisiana's Mouton, in the House, also made it.

"—history changes its mind."

It has been fashionable for almost two decades, in Washington and Europe's capitals, to say that Clemenceau and Lloyd George hoodwinked Woodrow Wilson at the Versailles peace conference . . . But lately the Prince Charmings of diplomacy have changed their minds; they say that Wilson outfoxed the European Metternichs, and they blame him for the 1938 upheavals, because he was (1) too lenient, or (2) too harsh with the losers of 1918.... ... ...

* * *

* * * *

Somehow President Roosevelt finds time amid the din for warm little acts which endear him to his intimates . . . Once when a lady of the Cabinet coterie sent him a jar of mushroom soup he radioed his thanks to her in mid-Atlantic.

Referendum On Suffrage Set April 29

Representatives of 271 Citizens' Groups Plan Ballot.

Residents of Washington will be given a chance to register their feelings on suffrage for the District in a referendum to be held April 29.

Decision to take the vote was made last night at a meeting of the newly formed executive committee of a citizens' group claiming to represent 271 civic, labor, parent-teacher, women's and other organizations, whose membership is scattered throughout the District.

The actual form of the question to be presented will be determined at the next meeting of the Citizens Conference on District Suffrage April 22.

The executive committee, which projected the suffrage referendum, was elected at a meeting of 100 members of the "campaign council," publicity and fund-raising body of the Citizens Conference.

Crowding into a room in the Times-Herald Building, the white and colored delegates ratified appointment of 16 members of the executive committee, provided for the election of seven more and insisted throughout the meeting on "the democratic process." Observing the rules of parliamentary procedure, they asserted, "if we want democracy in the District, we had better begin with democracy right here in this meeting."

Headed by Arthur Clarendon Smith and William H. Mondell, the "campaign council's" executive committee includes Charles A. Franklin, secretary; Marguerite L. Krenek, assistant secretary; Mrs. Clara Wright Smith, treasurer; Mrs. Donald E. Montgomery, chairman, committee on credentials; Carl Gerber, chairman, finance committee; Donald Sheehan, chairman, publicity committee; George Rycrau, Kenneth Armstrong, Sidney Katz, Walter Pinchback, Arthur Bernstein, Harry M. Stull, D. C. Dow and George A. Werner.

U.S. Meddling In GHA Fight Hit by Shafer

Deprecating charges by a colleague that "the District Medical Society is doing everything it can to break up the G. H. A. movement," Representative Paul W. Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday presented the first defense of the Capital's organized physicians on the House floor.

Shafer said that if the medical society is to be investigated by Congress, as recommended in a resolution submitted Monday by Representative Byron Scott (Democrat), of California, Group Health Association likewise should be investigated.

Concurrent developments in the drawn-out dispute over the group health movement, which will be four months old Friday, were a legal move to expedite court action on the status of G. H. A. and disclosure of a letter from a local hospital president to Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, defending the hospitals' position.

Dismissal Asked.

Harry L. Underwood and Howard Boyd, assistants to District Attorney David A. Pine, filed a motion for dismissal of a petition entered several weeks ago by G. H. A., counsel for District Court to clarify its legal status. Supporting their request for dismissal of the suit, the Government attorneys argued that Group Health Association is a corporation practicing medicine, which is illegal in the District.

J. Bach Moor, insurance superintendent for the District, is expected to file a similar motion in a few days. In instituting legal action under the new declaratory judgment act, Horace Russell, general counsel of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation and its offspring G. H. A., named Pine and Moor as defendants. The latter's position is that G. H. A. is engaged in the insurance business without complying with insurance laws.

Pine's maneuver, combined with the one expected shortly from Moor, calls for an answer by the group health forces and is intended to hasten court judgment on the moot association's legality.

The first hospital head to reply to Senator Capper's request for copies of charters and by-laws, Charles D. Drayon, president of the board of trustees of Children's Hospital, branded G. H. A. as a manifestation of "socialized medicine" and heartily indorsed the motives of the local medical profession.

Stand Explained.

"In taking the stand which we have felt compelled to take (exclusion of G. H. A. doctors), we are not unmindful of the appeal made by the Group Health Association to Government employes and others who desire to pay a small membership fee each month to defray the cost of possible hospital and medical care for themselves and their families," Drayton said.

"But we do not feel that the spread of socialized medicine can be permitted to disrupt and ultimately make impossible the conduct of the hospital as a charitable institution with the co-operation of a medical staff composed of some of the leading doctors of Washington."

Life for Bandits Held Too Harsh By Committee

Schulte Bill Referred to Corporation Counsel for Modification.

A brief hearing was held yesterday on the Schulte bill to send armed robbers to prison for life or to the electric chair, but members of the House subcommittee of the District Committee indicated they thought the proposed penalties too severe.

Chairman McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, said, however, that he was convinced of the need of assuring more stringent penalties on criminals. He said he intended to revive the District magistrate court bill first proposed by E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, as a partial solution.

"I believe that by relieving the judges of much burdensome detail," he said, "that they will have more time to study the major criminal cases."

Doubts Convictions.

Wilbur La Roe, jr., former chairman of the District parole board, and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, both testified against the Schulte bill and insisted its proposed penalties were too severe. Seal said that he doubted whether juries would convict when the courts are compelled to administer life or death sentences.

McGehee questioned La Roe about operations of the parole board and said criminals often were released without serving sentences commensurate with their crimes.

Bill Sent for Study.

Meanwhile, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, said he would propose to the House District Committee that a special sub-committee be named to consider revisions of the District's indeterminate sentence law on the ground that it is too lenient.

The Schulte bill was referred to the corporation counsel for study as to modification.

Walter Imboden, District Fireman, Dies at Hospital

Walter W. Imboden, 47, of Engine Company No. 5, District Fire Department, died in Emergency Hospital last night shortly after reporting for duty. His death was attributed to acute indigestion.

Imboden, who lived at 1737 North Seventeenth street, Arlington, Va., had been a member of the Fire Department 26 years. He reported for duty at 6 p. m. yesterday, apparently in good spirits and became ill about 6:30 p. m. He was removed to the hospital, where he died ten minutes after being admitted.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vera M. Imboden, and three daughters, Elizabeth, Louise and Isabel Imboden.

He was the son of Maj. James J. Imboden, of the Confederate Army, and a nephew of Brig. Gen. John D. Imboden, Confederate cavalry commander in the Shenandoah Valley until its occupation by Sheridan in 1864.

Bovine Twins Create Uproar In Barnyard

Mistress Away; Calves Run Riot With Dogs, Cats Adding to Hubub.

Reuben and Rachael, the twins born to Ruth, the cow on the farm of Miss Elizabeth McCuloch, near Colesville, Md., Saturday, took the air for the first time yesterday, and with a slight commotion near the barn door; for Faust, the German shepherd dog, started barking, which alarmed Ruth and brought Tiger, the cat, and Mac, the collie, on the run.

Miss McCulloch wasn't there to quiet them—she was in Baltimore—so the commotion ran its course out to a meadow where Ruth, Reuben and Rachel began nibbling the grass. Faust and Mac soon left to see how the ring-necked pheasants were getting on in the pen. Tiger went off to the barns where the rats eat the feed and where Tiger eats the rates. Things grew quiet, on the amazing farm Miss McCuloch has developed.

She has farmed the place—the 134 acres which were known as the Snowden Manor Farm in Colonial times—for nine years now. It all came about through circumstances. Ten years ago Miss McCuloch was a senior at Goucher College, Baltimore. She was majoring then in science. But her health became impaired and the physicians ordered her to the out-of-doors and to out-of-door work.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McCuloch, bought her the farm, then known as Lake Lure. Miss McCuloch's aim was to develop some fine stock and to do the work herself. The first thing she did was to start ploughing; then she bought two cows, one registered, one grade. That was all she started with. And this in the depression!

While many farmers "went under," she went on. The herd of fine-bred cattle increased, and now more than 50 are in the herd. Every acre of land is tended; Miss McCuloch oversees it all.

And in the interims of work she found time to attend the Agricultural School of the University of Maryland, being the only girl in the class. She is up every morning at 6, overseeing the milking and the men going to the fields. At 7 a. m. she is on a truck, and with one male helper delivers 230 quarts of milk around the Maryland countryside. She has built a good business—and health.

The farm was excited yesterday about the twins of Ruth. Once before twins have been born to a cow there—but such an event is unusual. The two young Guernseys are almost identically marked. Each has white hind legs, but the white on Rachael is more extended.

Citizens Protest Exemptions for Income Classes

Both Southeast and Logan-Thomas Circle Groups Join Fight.

Protests against exempting Cabinet members, members of Congress and their secretaries from the District income tax, were made last night by the Southeast and the Logan-Thomas Circle citizens associations.

The Southeast group, meeting at the Fifth Precinct Police Station, charged that such exemptions would be "unjust and unfair." The association also urged that the Congressional Library be rededicated and named the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Library.

Two 'Raffles' Take Chance but Police Get Their Number

Police last night took an interest in the affairs of two young Treasury Department employes, because, they reasoned, selling chances on watches to their fellow workers might be all right, but stealing the watches wasn't.

The pair are employed as runners by the Treasury, but, apparently, the title has no reference to speed because one of the young men couldn't run fast enough to get away from Policeman H. L. Thompson and John R. Scharf, clerk in jewelry store at 903 F street northwest.

Thousands of Washingtonians witnessed the chase during the F street rush hour yesterday after Scharf, according to the police, his suspicions of the pair aroused by their actions in his store, followed them to a jewelry shop at 921 F street northwest and saw them take two watches.

De los Rios Sees 'Spanish Road' At Pierce Hall

With Dr. Fernando de los Rios, the Spanish Ambassador, guest of honor, the Washington Chapter of the League of American Writers at the Sidney Shosteck Branch of Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade presented "The Spanish Road" in Pierce Hall last night.

There were uniforms and masks and considerable anti-Fascist pageantry, but the lighting and the narrative which came over a loudspeaker were impressionistic.

Spain's history since the civil war broke out in the summer of 1936 was depicted in the series of scenes, the first entitled "Old Spain," and the last "The International Brigade."

Mussolini, Hitler and Franco were portrayed behind masks, plotting against democracy. Scenes in which civilians were bombed were made realistic by the sound of missives whistling from the sky.

Ruhland Maps Drive to Reduce Cancer in D. C.

Private Hospital Service to Be Improved to Reduce Deaths.

Announcement of the proposed fight against the dread disease in the District followed proclamation yesterday by President Roosevelt of April as "cancer control month."

Cancer deaths are comparatively high here, according to health department statistics, although the department has no permanent bureau to fight the disease.

First step in the campaign will be to provide adequate publicity, in order to bring persons into health institutions for diagnosis. Dr. Ruhland stated that it is possible to successfully treat cancer if brought to the attention of physicians in its earlier stages.

Lectures on the subject will be sponsored by the Health Department with co-operation of the District Medical Society and the United States Public Health Service.

Development of the out-patient service of private hospitals was urged by Dr. Ruhland.

"There are many people in the low-income group who cannot afford adequate hospitalization," he stated. "This service would take care of these people."

Bass Drummer for 8 Presidential Inaugurals To Quit Army Tomorrow to 'Take Things Easy'

Master Segt. Tovornick, in Service 30 Years, to Be Retired.

After 30 years of service as a bass drummer and bass violin player with the country's major service bands, Master Sergt. Frederick Tovornick, 50, will be retired tomorrow with brief ceremonies at the Army War College.

Sergt. Tovornick is a native of Yugoslavia. He studied music in Vienna and came to this country in 1908 to enlist in the Army at West Point, N. Y. He served four years with the post band there and later went to the Naval Academy, where he remained a year.

For 11 years he was a member of the United States Marine Band, and upon his retirement tomorrow, will have served 14 years with the Army Band.

In his service, Sergt. Tovornick has played for 8 Presidential inaugurations, beginning with the induction of President Taft.

But from now on, said Sergt Tovornick, he will "just take things easy."

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1938 ****

This Morning

Baseball's Grand Hotel Is Full of Rumors.

By Shirley Povich.

Tampa, Fla.

To whom it may concern:

This is the baseball writers' haven . . . here notes are compared, here the choicest baseball gossip is passed and hear you glean the low-down on big league affairs . . . for Tampa is the winter baseball capital of the Nation, the hub of the big league universe in March and April . . . here it was that Dizzy Dean last year led the charge of the Gas House Gang against two tabloid correspondents in the Tampa Terrace Hotel lobby and here the telegraph companies concentrate their forces to handle the baseball dispatches to the North.

POVICH.

Tampa is the winter home of the Cincinnati Reds, but it is the stopping-off place for a half-dozen other big league ball clubs and their camp followers . . . From nearby Lakeland come the Detroit Tigers to play in Tampa, and from Orlando, 100 miles away, come the Nats . . . From Bradenton, 37 miles distant, the Braves make the journey to play the Reds, and from Sarasota, less than 50 miles away come the Red Sox . . . 22 miles across the Gandi Bridge are the Cardinals and Yankees at St. Petersburg, and 21 miles in another direction are the Brooklyn Dodgers at Clearwater.

Here you learn that the Chicago White Sox offered Zeke Bonura only a $500 raise in the $12,000 contract he owned last season, and that Ben Chapman offered to bet Don Gotterdge, Cardinal infielder, $500 that he could beat him in a 100-yard straight away race . . . From St. Petersburg drifts the startling news that Sammy Baugh has lately been a sensation in the camp of the Cardinals and a bet has been made that he will start the season at third base for Frankie Frisch's club.

"He's the best fielding rookie I've ever seen," Frankie Frisch has been saying lately of Baugh, and the reports are that he is beginning to hit . . . Baugh actually didn't know how to hold a bat when he reported to the Cardinals, according to St. Louis newspapermen, but for the past week he has been getting a special batting drill and has begun to hammer the ball . . . The ugly duckling of the St. Louis camp is beginning to blossom as a potential star . . . And here you learn that Dizzy Dean is actually on good terms with his Cardinal teammates this season and that Pepper Martin, Ducky Medwick, et al., whom Dean used to call "a bunch of bushers." are now pulling for him to stage a comeback.

They tell you, too, that Harry Craft, the young centerfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, will be a sure-fire sensation this season, and you recall that the Washington club shooed Craft out of the Biloxi camp in 1935 after a two-day trial . . . Despite the insistence of Buddy Myer, who sponsored the lad, that he was a big leaguer in the making . . . You gather from the lack of fights in the Tampa Terrace lobby this season that peace has finally broken out in the baseball colony . . . The nearest thing to an encounter lately was Henry McLemore's brush with the press box steps at Bradenton the other day in which he lost a fall and suffered a torn ligament in his shoulder . . . but McLemore, with one hand behind his back, can still lick any assignment.

Rivalry at St. Petersburg between the Cardinals and the Yankees is so fierce that 6,900 natives turned out to see them battle the other day . . . a new record crowd for a Florida exhibition game . . . Losing 4 out of 6 games to the Cardinals, the Yankees were beaten in an exhibition series for the first time since 1926 . . . the Yankees actually aren't doing so well . . . Gehrig is suffering from a sore hand and Frankie Crosetti is stricken with a charley horse . . . young Joe Gordon, who will play alongside Crosetti in the Yankee infield, has had little opportunity to work with the shortstop and may be very much of a green pea at second base when the season starts.

Tonight, before the assembled correspondents of a half-dozen newspapers, Al Simmons was pooh-poohing the effects of Joe DiMaggio's holdout tactics on the Yankees this season . . . "He'll sign eventually and everything will be all right," said Simmons. "Back in 1930, after we won a pennant for the A's, I didn't sign up until a half hour before the opening game of the season. They wouldn't even let me work out with the club. Then when the opening game started, I banger out a home run in my first time at the bat!"

Here, you learn from Clark Griffith, who stole over to watch the Reds play the Tigers while his Nats were at Bradenton, that the National League is pulling a fast one in advertising it has adopted the dead ball . . . "It ain't no dead ball," says Griffith. "That's the bunk. They're trying to match the American League slugging so they've adopted a livelier ball than our league . . . Today I saw that Little Myers, the Reds' shortstop, hit two home runs over the centerfield fence against that thing they call their dead ball. It's got a jack rabbit in it. Babe Ruth never hit a ball that far."

The Tampa Terrace is abuzz with reports that the Red Sox have picked up two swell young pitchers in Bagby and Wagner . . . That huge bonuses have been promised the Tigers by Owner Walter Briggs if they knock off the Yankees and win the pennant . . . That Judge Landis has the goods on other clubs besides the St. Louis Cardinals and will soon declare a dozen more players free agents . . . That Chicago fans are in a mood to boycott the White Sox for making the Bonura-Kuhel deal and that Bob Feller's control is so horrible he'll be lucky to win ten games this season . . . You hear all these things because this is baseball's Grand Hotel.

Buddy Lewis Hits Double, Triple, Single

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 29.—The Nats found minor league pitching highly enjoyable this afternoon after a two-day famine against major league pitchers, and clubbed out a 13-4 victory over the Columbus Red Birds, of the American Association.

Three left-handers who faced the Nats' fire were all but blasted out of their uniforms by the Washington athletes, particularly Mr. Zeke Bonura, Mr. Buddy Lewis and Mr. Goose Goslin.

Lewis collected four of the Nats' 13 hits—a single, a double, a triple and a safe bunt, Bonura accumulated three and Goslin—ah, he sent historp pages whirring backward, because be hit an old-fashioned Goslin home run.

That clout of the Goose was enough, by itself, to gladden the heart of Manager Bucky Harris, who is beginning to vision the old fellow as a distinct asset to the Nats. Goslin was at bat only once, but he batted an emphatic 1.000.

A Powerful Clout.

Buddy Lewis and Taft Wright were reposing on base when Goslin strode to the plate in the eighth inning. The Goose was fed a high, inside pitch and then the Goslin bat erupted. It exploded a line drive that whizzed over first base, came to earth near the rightfield foul line and would have traveled into the next county had there been no fence. Goslin scored standing up.

Bonura, however, didn't exactly disgrace himself today. The big Italian had a powerful hand in the Nats' triumph, especially in that sixth inning when the Nats rushed seven runs across the plate to wipe out a 4-3 deficit.

Big Zeke started that sixth-inning business with his second straight single to lefteld and before the inning was over he knocked young Mike Mastynik out of the box with his second hit of the session. In between times, Mastynik walked three batters, pitched singles to Cecil Travis and Johnny Stone, and a double to Buddy Lewis.

Leonard Stops Birds.

Emil Leonard, the proprietor of the only knuckle ball on the Nats' pitching staff, made another bid for favor with Manager Harris today with four shut-out innings after relieving Ken Chase. Leonard was using his knuckler generously, walked only one batter, struck out two, never was in danger of being scored on, didn't allow a man to reach second base and gave up only three hits, one of which was an infield affair.

Chase, who yielded up seven hits and all of Columbus' runs in the first five innings, was not exactly a bum. Danaher's fluke double, which took a weird hop past Bonura's chin, accounted for two runs against Chase in the first innings and two spotty infield hits were responsible for another Red Bird run in the third. Chase walked only one hitter and showed signs of developing control.

Maryland Nine Beats Buckeyes; Stickmen Win Over Swarthmore

Baseball Team Scores 10-1 Victory Over Invaders for Second Victory of New Season.

By Jack Munhall.

Maryland University's stick squads enjoyed a profitable afternoon yesterday, pounding a pair of Ohio State pitchers, a lacrosse pill, and the heads of a few Swarthmore players before emerging with a double victory before 1,500 students at College Park.

It was undoubtedly a mistake when the lacressemen happened to bean an Indian while handing out an 8-to-3 trouncing, but it certainly was deliberate the way Burt Shipley's veteran nine swatted a pair of Buckeye aces for 14 hits and a 10-to-1 decision.

The upshot of the afternoon's play served as further proof that Maryland has a great college baseteam and a lacrosse ten that is loaded with potential strength. Although the lacrossemen did not elicit praise from Coach Jack Faber for their opening exhibition, they conducted themselves in a manner that forebodes "grief" for future opponents

Faber was fairly well satisfied with the work of Fred Hewitt, who scored five goals, and the improvement of Milt Mulitz and a couple of other youngsters. But he warned his charges that a repetition of yesterday's mistakes would draw a fine shellacking from Mount Washington, Saturday's foe.

Shipley Is Pleased.

Shipley, however, voided few squawks as he watched his Terrible Terps continue to make life unsafe for organized pitchers and also weigh in with fine pitching and fielding. Particularly pleased was the Maryland mentor with the flinging of Wee Willie Silverman, the hitting of Lefty Chumbris and the catching of Joe Crisaful.

Silverman, a sophomore and former Roosevelt High School star, put in a strong bid for a starting role with his smart hurling. Although wild at times, the right-hander was increasingly tough to hit as he mixed a fast ball and wide-breaking curves. He also showed plenty of moxie by ending several Ohio State uprisings with strikeouts.

In the first inning, Silverman was in trouble when he walked two men after two were out. But he bore down on Wulfhurst and sent the Buckeye to the bench with his bat on his shoulder where it had remained as a sweeping curve hugged the corner of the plate.

George Wood replaced Silverman in the fifth and proved equally as efficient, allowing only two singles in the next four innings. His slow stuff had the Buckeyes swinging late and seldom did they connect for a solid blow.

Terps Take Early Lead.

Meanwhile the Terps were amassing a comfortable lead as Shorty and Lefty Chumris, Wav Wheeler and Mike Surgent led a consistent attack that produced six runs in the first four innings. Chumbris whose weak hitting had given rise to rumors that Hugh Keller would replace him in right field rapped out a pair of singles in as many trips.

Surgent was the real batting hero, however, with three ringing singles in five attempts. Even when he got out, the big leftfielder smacked the ball squarely on the nose and with luck might have had at least one other safety.

In the lacrosse match, Maryland picked up three goals before Swarthmore was able to score and although playing sloppily in spots was never headed. The passing of Jarrin' Jim Meade led to several tallies.

This afternoon a third Maryland squad swings into action with the track team entertaining undefeated Michigan State at 3:30 o'clock. The Spartans, especially strong in the distance events, recently won the indoor games at Morgantown and appear too strong for the Old Liners.

Maryland, however, will benefit by the return of Coleman Headley, crack middle distance man, who was out last season on account of illness. Then the strong mile relay team of Thies, Chronister, Miller and Cronin should win its start for the quartet is unbeaten in four indoor races this season and also annexed the Southern Conference title.

Apology Seen as Help.

Providence, R. I., March 29 (AP).—Attorney General John P. Hartigan said today the fact that Walter E. O'Hara, former race track head, had apologized publicly to Gov. Robert E. Quinn would "make it difficult to secure a conviction" in Quinn's libel suit against O'Hara.

ChurchHeads Oppose Bill

Civic Leaders Also Hit Racing Measure.

Simultaneously with the announcement of Mississippi State Senator Dan McGehee yesterday that the Sacks racing bill would be given to the sub-committee within a few days, church, civic and school officials appeared before the committee to vigorously protest passage of the bill that would legalize horse race betting.

Wilbur A. LaRoe, jr., chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, offered strongest opposition to the bill, stating he was representing 139 Protestant churches in Washington and nearby vicinity, claiming a membership of 70,000 parishioners.

Others who voiced opposition were Charles V. Imlay, Woodrow Wilson Home and School Association; Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association; W. J. Tucker, Anacostia Citizens Association; L. A. Carruthers, persident of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Paul M. Williams, District Christian Endeaver Union.

Garner Puts Okay On Bonura 'Deal'

By the Associated Press.

Vice President Garner—the Washington Nationals No. 1 fan—put his official O. K. yesterday on the Joe Kuhel-for-Zeke Bonura swap.

"He ought to held our team a lot," Garner said, referring to Bonura, whom Washington obtained from the Chicago White Sox.

It was a few miutes before Senate meeting time. The ruddy-faced Texan was in good humor He was—as the ball players say—caught in a fanning bee.

"Funny thing about that fellow Bonura," drawled Garner. "I got to to talking to him once and asked him if it was true that his father gave him $100 every time he knocked a home run."

"Bonura said it was true, and he said he had been pretty hard on the old man recently."

Dodgers Shell Tigers to Win, 15-2.

By the Associated Press.

Clearwater, Fla., March 29.—The Brooklyn Dodgers pounded out 18 assorted blows and walloped the Detroit Tigers, 15 to 2, behind the two-hit slinging of Waite Hoyt and Fred Frankhouse today.

Hoyt yielded both Toger hits, including Roy Cullenbine's homer with one on in the third, but connected for a four-bagger himself with one aboard in the fourth. It was the first homer of his major league career.

Tom Winsett hit for the circuit twice and Buddy Hassett once as the Dodgers scored all their runs in three big innings. Vernon Kennedy, Detroit's starting pitcher, was touched for the first 10 runs on 11 hits, and Roxie Lawson for the rest.

CARDS BLANKED, 1-0.

Tarpon Springs, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Two walks off Morton Cooper and a single by Ray Gillenwater gave the Rochester Red Wings a 1-to-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in 13 innings here today.

The Cards, playing through most of the game with reserves in the line-up, made only two hits off four Rochester hurlers. Johnny Mize singled in the second and Justin Stein doubled in the twelfth. Three Cardinal pitchers were nicked for eight hits.

YANKS BEAT BLUES.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29 (AP). With Lou Gehrig back in the line-up, the New York Yankees again conquered their Kansas City "farm" team in an exhibition game today, 5 to 4.

Although Spud Chandler and Atley Donald, young flingers, pitched effectively, the Yanks didn't get their winning run until the ninth inning, when Red Rolfe singled, took third on Eddie Joost's wild throw and scored on George Selkirk's single after Gehrig had been passed.

Gehrig, out for several days with a sore hand, made one hit in two official times at bat.

Clark Plaque Honors Star

Two months ago Earl Clark, Washington's greatest all-round athlete, was killed in an automobile accident.

So that the memory of his spirit of fair play may never pass from the playgrounds where he first excelled in all sports an Earl Clark plaque will be presented today by his young widow, Eleanor Jones Clark, to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. The plaque is to be held in his custody for the District Playgrounds Association.

Each year the young athlete who best exemplifies the ideals and sportsmanship exhibited by Earl Clark will have his name inscribed upon the memorial trophy.

The plaque was given Mrs. Clark by the employes of the distribution division of Federal Housing Administration in memory of their fellow employe. She will donate it to the District Playgrounds Association, for, as Mrs. Clark says, "Earl would want to leave some living reminder with the playgrounds he enjoyed so much."

From the local playgrounds where Earl Clark established an assortment of records that still stand unbroken, he ascended to the peak of his athletic greatness with the Boston Braves.

Even in the big leagues he continued to break records, making 12 putouts and 1 assist for 13 chances, May, 1929. Only one outfielder previously had made 12 putouts, but Clark's performance was in a 9-inning game, while Harry Bay, with Cleveland in the early days of the American League, had turned the trick, but in a 12-inning game.

Junior Navy Boxers Prepare for Big Event

Annapolis, Md., March 29 (AP).—Eighty-four flyweight boxers, ranging in age from 2 to 14 years, today were in hard training for the nineteenth annual championship bouts of the Navy junior boxing class to be held at the Naval Academy Saturday.

The youngsters, sons of officers and instructors on duty at the academy, have been under the instruction of H. B. (Spike) Webb, Navy's veteran boxing coach, since early in January. They have reported each Saturday for training in preparation for the championship tests.

Goslin Offered Post By Connie Mack

The evidence was beginning to show today that Leon "Goose" Goslin, prime favorite of Washington fans in past years, had won his battle for a job with the 1938 Nats.

The broad-beamed, semibald outfielder who at 37 is attempting to make a big league comeback, will be tendered a contract by the Nats this week, Manager Bucky Harris indicated.

Goslin, who had been training at his own expense with the Nats for the past two weeks after the Detroit Tigers had given him his unconditional release, could sign with the Philadelphia Athletics if he desired, he said today.

Goslin revealed that Manager Connie Mack, of the A's., had communicated with him by long distance telephone, asking him to report to the Athletics at St. Charles, La., immediately. Goslin deferred his answer.

Today the Goose advised Harris of the Philadelphia offer and the Nats manager asked the veteran to return to Orlando with the Nats for a consultation with Owner Clark

Col. Tillinghast Huston, Man Who Started Babe Ruth to Fame, Dies at His Desk on Georgia Estate

By the Associated Press.

Brunswick, Ga., March 29.—Col. Tillinghast L. Huston, who made more than $1,000,000 as co-owner of the New York Yankees before retiring to a Georgia plantation, died unexpectedly in his home today.

The 71-year-old former baseball magnate, as partner of Col. Jacob Ruppert, present owner of the world champions, was instrumental in the deal that put the now-retired Babe Ruth in a Yankee uniform.

Death claimed the veteran baseball enthusiast shortly after noon at the desk from which he directed operations of a 1,250-acre estate noted for prize Guensey cattle and iceberg lettuce.

Arthur Huston, a son, said Huston was at his desk with Miss Alice Johnston, his secretary, when he slumped over and died "from what is believed to have been a sudden heart failure."

Huston, who gained first the title of captain of engineers in the Spanish-American War and later that of colonel of engineers in the World War, purchased the Yankees with Col. Ruppert in 1915. Each contributed about $200,000 toward the purchase of the club.

The aged sportsman received between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 for his half interest in the Yankees when he relinquished his holdings to Col. Ruppert in June, 1923. During the co-ownership the Yankees were transformed from a mediocre club to the most valuable property in the major leagues.

Greatest success of the Yankee Club was achieved when Miller Huggins was made manager in 1917. With the two colonels' ever-ready checkbook handy, many big deals were engineered, chief of which was Ruth's purchase from the Boston Red Sox.

The co-owners ran into disagreement over Huggins' managerial operations and this contributed to the break up of the partnership. Huston wanted to place an old friend and hunting companion, Wilbert Robinson, as manager. Robinson was then piloting Brooklyn. He died about three years ago.

"I always told Robby," Huston said in an interview two years ago, "that whenever he could get a reasonable price on the Brooklyn Baseball Club, myself and friends would buy it, make him the ruling factor in its management and make it possible for him to acquire stock in the club. I think Uncle Robby cherished this hope right up to his death. I always felt that Robby and I together could build up a winner."

Cols. Ruppert and Huston invested about $750,000 in the Yankees before the club started paying dividends. They erected the present Yankee stadium at a cost of $2,300,000 and were called "plungers" for doing it.

Mrs. Huston and the son were at the Huston home at Sea Island Beach at the time of his death. Butler Island, where the sportsman succumbed, is located 12 miles north of here in the Altamaha River delta lands near Darien.

Although he had remained out of actual touch with baseball since he sold out to Col. Ruppert several years ago, Huston continued to maintain a keen interest in the game. One of his desires was to purchase a major league club and install Babe Ruth as manager.

Back in 1934 he opened negotiations with owners in the hope of obtaining the franchise of the Brooklyn Dodgers, offering $1,500,000. Less than two weeks ago, following the death of Stephen W. McKeever, president of the Dodgers, Huston said "the money still is on the line, but not as much as there was at one time."

It was rumored in basebal circles several months ago that Huston and Richard J. Reynolds, Winston-Salem tobacco millionaire who resides at Sapeloe Island, near here, would buy the Brooklyn club, but the report brought a denial from Huston.

Besides his widow and son, Col. Huston is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Walter A. Leonard, of New York, and Mrs. W. D. McKim, of Philadelphia.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Two Champions Will Be Crowned in Post-A. A. U. Cage Games Tonight

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, March 29.—Lawson Robertson, coach of the last four American Olympic track and field teams, suggests that a biennial athletic competition among the United States, the commonwealth of the British Empire, France and the Scandinavian countries be substituted for the Olympic games.

Robertson, of Pennsylvania U., believes that competitions every two years among the above-named countries would serve better the cause of international athletics than the olympics, which threaten to become enmeshed in national rivalries.

"The 1936 games in Germany and those planned for Japan in '40 leave a taste in my mouth," Robertson said in an exclusive interview. "They smack of diplomatic intrigue rather than sportsmanship."

If Coach Robertson felt this way about the modern Olympics, would he accept the post of track and field pilot again if named for the job?

"Certainly I would," said the 54-year-old mentor. "I would be glad to assist the 1940 team, because I'm sure the United States squad will need plenty of help and supervision."

* * * *

What did he mean by that?

"I mean that the American team—at least the track and field representation—probably will be beaten at Tokyo for the first time since the United States entered Olympic competition in 1896. Our track and field strength, at least, may be weakened considerably by Japan's change of the dates for the games. They have set them September 21 to October 6. That means the American squad could not return home until about November 1, and that many college athletes might be unable to compete. Remember, about 60 per cent of our recent track and field men have been college undergraduates.

"When you consider the attitude of many university officials toward sports, you can appreciate that a number of college athletes might not be given special permission to make the long trip to Tokyo and be absent from their studies during much of the autumn semester in 1940."

* * * *

In addition to the collegiate handicaps, Coach Robertson also emphasized the possible difficulty of financing a complete United States representation in Japan. "You recall the difficulties we had raising funds for the representation that went to Berlin after the anti-Nazi hue and cry," he said. "Well, it seems to me that there is considerable pro-Chinese sympathy in our country right now. Our funds are raised by public subscription. This is one of the few countries in which the Government gives no Olympic subsidy. If our people do not contribute, we do not get the necessary funds."

Robertson warned also that, with 57 countries competing in the Olympics, with international bickerings increasing, and with the site of the games being moved farther and farther away from the centers of athletic population, the games were becoming too unwieldy for concentrtion on the athletics.

* * * *

"I understand that Melbourne, Australia, is campaigning now to have the Olympics held there in 1944," he said.

Whether we have Olympics or biennial games among a few chosen countries, Robertson believes the contests should always be held in a city near the centers of athletic population, preferably Athens, Greece, cradle of Olympiads.

He prefers biennial competitions instead of the quadrennial Olympic games, because he believes that many fine athletes reach their peaks and fade during the four-year interim; then fail to make a team—the great goal of all amateur athletes. And he prefers competition among the United States, Britain, France and the Scandinavian countries because these nations seldom are involved in international disputes and "have a clearer understanding of Olympic ideals."

Robertson said many prominent Englishmen favor this type of competition. Brig. Gen. A. C. Critchley, well-known British sportsman and promoter of London's famous Wembley Stadium, discussed this proposition throughly with Robertson during the Berlin games.

Louis Completes Work for Thomas

Before a packed gymnasium, the bomber sent one sparmate to the canvas with a right-hand smash to the chin. He demonstrated such accuracy with his right that some observers predicted he intends to put a quick finish to the scheduled 15-round engagement.

Louis worked the equivalent of eight rounds, closing his workout with a session of bag punching. He will wind up training tomorrow by sparring two rounds.

Boys Clubs Oppose in Title Tilts

Regal Clothiers Meet Little Tavern Five at 9:30 P. M.

By Jack Munhall.

The first two champions of the eleventh annual Post-A. A. U. basketball tournament will be determined tonight when titular contests in the 85 and 115-pound classes feature a four-game program. Three of the games will be played at Tech gym, with one, a 130-pound affair scheduled for the Boys Club of Washington.

Opening the card at Tech at 7:30 will be the 85-pound contest involving, oddly enough, two fives from the Boys Club of Washington—the Georgetown and Central branches. This game will be followed an hour later by the clash between Merrick Boys Club and Boys Club of Washington, Northeast branch, for the 115-pound crown.

Then at 9:30, Regal Clothiers, strong favorite to win the unlimited title stacks up against Little Tavern in what promises to be a good game. Regal, with Tom Folliard, Acky Viana, "Sully" Sullivan, Reds Daly and Pickles Walker in its lineup, figures to beat the Hamburger lads but the latter are capable of providing plenty of opposition to the Heurich Cup League champion. This is a quarter final engagement.

The handsome Washington Post trophies, which will be given to the winners in the seven men's and women's classes, will be ready in time for the final games on Saturday as well as will the A. A. U. gold medals which will be given to all members of the championship teams.

Tomorrow the unlimited women's teams return to action in a pair of games at Tech, where the meeting of Delaware & Hudson with Y. M. C. A. is billed as the headliner.

Opening the card at 7:30 o'clock, the girls of Mount Rainier A. C. take on Hyattsville A. C. At 8:30 Rockville A. C., choice to annex the championship, faces Agriculture, with the main game following at 9:30.

In the only games yesterday Stewart Photographers swamped Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 5, 31-11, and Northeast Boys Club drubbed Georgetown Boys Club 27-13. They were both 130-pound class games.

Neither winning team had any difficulty amassing big half-time leads and coasting in easily. Darden, with 10 points, and Connelly, with 7, paced Stewart, while Red Bradfield and Chip Collins scored 10 and 7, respectively to lead the Police.

Man o' War Becomes Papa of a Bouncing Filly As He Celebrates His Twenty-First Birthday

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Man o' War, famous racing sire, is shown as Caretaker Will Harbut bridled him to lead him from his Kentucky stall yesterday for his twenty-first birthday party. The old boy looked like a youngster, save for small hollows above his eyes, a sure sign of equine age. It was a doubly important birthday for Big Red, whose son, Battleship, recently won the Grand National in England.

'Big Red' Has Party and a Broadcast at His Farm.

By the United Press.

Lexington, Ky., March 29.—Man o' War, America's most famous race horse, today celebrated his twenty-first birthday with a formal party, a Nation-wide broadcast and—as an added attraction—became a father again when Brush Up foaled a bay filly.

"Big Red," who paid $3,656,451 on an original investment of $5,000, just stood and blinked in his stall as unperturbed by the birth of his 259th foal as he was at the clicking cameras and the broadcast of the birthday party.

More than ordinary attention was focused on his birthday this year because only last Friday one of "Big Red's" sons, Battleship, won the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England, to become the first American-reared horse ever to win the English classic.

New Filly "Big."

Harrie B. Scott, manager of Samuel Riddle's picturesque Faraway Farms, said the new filly had "plenty of size."

Man o' War's sons and daughters have won a total of $2,406,986. In addition, Man o' War earned $249,465 during his two years of racing and has brought in another $1,000,000 in stud fees.

By 7 a. m., Man o' War was out of his barn and on an eight-mile jaunt.

At 8 a. m., visitors began arriving and Man o' War obligingly posed for amateur photographers. The horse isn't camera shy because most of the 40,000 persons who annually visit him snap his picture.

"Red" Has Guests.

At midmorning, a formal birthday party was held for the benefit of the news reels with Owner Samuel D. Riddle and Miss Frances Kane as the horse's honored "guests." Miss Kane is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Kane, manager of the nursery stud at which Man o' War was foaled.

Then "lunch" was served and after a short rest Man o' War was given the "run" of the green pastures before "dinner," a three-course affair. An extra fine bunch of fresh carrots provided the salad course; crushed oats, clover and timothy, the principal course; and several lumps of sugar from Riddle's hand, the desert.

Normally, Man o' War goes to bed after "dinner," but tonight he stayed up to be "interviewed" over a National Broadcasting Company hook-up.

Despite his age, Man o' War still is in perfect condition and Riddle said today he planned to keep him in stud three or four more years.

Heavyweights To Headline Monday Card

An humble and penitent matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, last night announced a peace offering in the guise of a heavyweight bout for next Monday night, to the fans for the late and unlamented Archibald-Schibelli fiasco.

It will be Eddie Mader vs. Red Burman, ten rounds or a knockout. And the bout, in Ahearn's deflated opinion, should more than atone for the lack of action in the last feature.

"I woke up yesterday with a hangover," the matchmaker moaned. "I guess I'm taking the fights too seriously. I got to stop doing that. You know after the knockout I felt all alone out there at the arena. All alone with all those people there. How's that song go, "There are a million people around and I'm lonesome," well, that's how I felt.

"You know, the knockout wasn't so bad, even if Archibald ended things too quickly. It was that semifinal. It left a sour taste in the people's mouth and made 'em gripe about the feature. The last bout wasn't bad at all. It was the semi-final that did it."

"Another thing, that's the first bad fight we've had in 25 or 30," he continued, apparently forgetting that a moment before it hadn't been such a bad scrap. "A matchmaker figures to get three bad fights in every four features, did you know that? If he gets two good ones in four he's lucky. So look at me. Aren't 99¾ per cent of my shows good? And they holler about that one."

The boxing commission, meanwhile, didn't accuse Ahearn of taking his fights too nonchalantly, and directed that Archibald's future opponents be submitted several weeks in advance for a commission check-up and approval. The order was forwarded by mail.

Mader, getting back to next week's feature briefly, is the last man to win from beer-guzzling Tony Galento. In his last appearance here he was knocked out in the sixth round by Bob Tow. Burman recently boxed a draw with Tow, and only Monday was rated the eighth leading contender for the heavyweight title by the N. B. A. Burman, a Baltimorean controlled by Jack Dempsey, campaigned around here as a middleweight under the name of K. O. Burns—which was very misleading.

RED SOX TAKE REDS.

Tampa, Fla., March 29 (AP).—Breaking a 4-4 deadlock with two-run rallies in each of the last two innings, the Boston Red Sox defeated the Cincinnati today, 8 to 4.

'Crusher' Casey May Be Made Wrestling's 'Universal Champ'

Steve Casey, Princess Baba and Bob Gregory, three of the four principals in tomorrow night's mat show at the Arena, will be in our midst bright and early tomorrow morning and probably celebrating Casey's victory over Danno O'Mahoney, whom he wrestles tonight at New York.

Gino Garibaldi, Casey's prospective opponent tomorrow night, and his little brother will be here, too, but not to celebrate. It's strictly a business trip for the Italian.

The appearance of Casey and Garibaldi in the same ring, nay same bout, is significant, for it may mark the end of a bitter feud between rival factions in wrestling. A feud that would make the original backwoods variety seem like a country fair by comparison. Garibaldi is aligned with the Duseks, while Casey is strictly Bowser.

It may be that the boys have patched up their difficulties after feeling the pinch of a depression, and are preparing to crown a world, international and universal champion for their mutual profit.

If this is true, Casey is the logical man to head the new setup. He has more holds than an octopus and box-office appeal a la Jim Londos. The Greek's mantle would fit nicely. Nagurski, champion of the Dusek circuit, is a fairly good performer and has a good pull at the till, but doesn't compare with Casey in all-around qualifications.

Not since Londos have the mat moguls had a man they could entrust the crown to with any degree of confidence. Casey works and looks as though he actually can defend the title, successfully, in a "shooting" match. That being the case, it will be good business to give to him with a bumper crop of challengers around to keep the wheel turning and promoters happy.

Board Okays Ross Title Go

Fistic Fathers Map Out Big Outdoor Season.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—The New today drafted a summer boxing York State Athletic Commission program that will give New York at least two and possibly three outdoor championship bouts in the welterweight and lightweight divisions.

The commission approved a welterweight title match for May 28 between Champion Barney Ross and Challenger Henry Armstrong, who already holds the featherweight crown. It further decreed that, if Ross beats Armstrong, he will defend his title against Lou Ambers July 26, while Armstrong will fight Ambers for the latter's lightweight championship September 14.

Should Armstrong beat Ross on May 26, then he will go against Ambers for the lightweight laurels July 26.

10 Juveniles Vie in Bowie Stake Event

Charlotte Girl Is Held 8-5 in Kindergarten Race on Friday.

Elwood Sachsenmaier's Charlotte Girl, undefeated champion 2-year-old filly of Florida's winter season, is the early 8-to-5 favorite to capture the $2,000 Kindergarten, half-mile feature of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's opening program on Friday at Bowie.

At least ten other 2-year-olds will oppose Charlotte Girl on Friday, according to Race Secretary John B. Campbell. The likely starters are:

HORSE	OWNER	JOCKEY
Charlotte Girl	Sachsenmaier	Renick
Shining One	J. H. Whitney	Gilbert
Our Chuckie	Bomar Stable	Simmons
Watchover	H. Bruce	Workman
Sky Flyer	A. Untermyer	Smith
Woodlark	Mrs. Denemark	Longden

*Substantial	W. Zeigler, jr.	Seabo
Royal Teddy	E. R. Pike	Dabson
Royal Bit	Millsdale Stable	Wrope

First run in 1926, the Bowie Kindergarten has since been won by Red Rocket, Rapid Transit, Sand Fiddler, Vander Pool, Portam, Acautaw, Wise Daughter, Angelio, Bright Light, Irrepressible and Benjam in the order named. Vander Pool holds the time record of .47 for the outstatnding 2-year-old race of the approaching 12 days sport.

While Charlotte Girl is a heavy favorite, numerous handlers of the split second watches look for an upset, with Shining One furnishing the surprise. John Hay Whitney's youngster has improved greatly since racing in Florida, according to the timers, who tabbed the thoroughbred at Hialeah, Bennings and here.

General Manager Joseph B. Boyle has set the post time for Friday's opening program at 2:30 p. m. Seven races will be run. The daily double will be in charge of Mortimer M. Mahony, who will have a picked crew of 250 men, including 90 sellers and a like number of cashiers, in attendance.

Boyle, who first introduced the daily double to Maryland tracks, will offer the Jones high speed camera for the first time. This camera, which will photograph all finishes, can reproduce a picture in 50 seconds.

Determined to stamp out the nefarious practice of sponging horses, General Manager Doyle will have Drs. Henry J. McCarthy, Thomas A. Ladson and R. W. Tracy examine all horses in the paddock before they go postward. This is the first time three veterinarians have been engaged at a State track. Furthermore, Boyle will have an armed staff of police patrol the course at night with orders to manhandle anyone caught tampering with thoroughbreds.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR KETCHAM, $9.00, $4.70, $4.80; FEEDMAN, $6.40, $5.00; SURE CLOUD, $9.70.

OUR KETCHAM was rated off the early pace until turning into the stretch, slipped through between the leaders and won going away. FEEDMAN followed the fast pace of SURE CLOUD, then outgamed the latter at the finish, but was not equal to the winner. SURE CLOUD opened up a length advantage down the backstretch, then weakened in the stretch run.

Daily Double, Flying Victory and Our Ketchem, Paid $211.10.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:23. Off 3:26½. Winner, Woodvale Farm's b. g. (2), by The Scout—Flower of Yarrow. Trained by S. Judge. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALL SPADES, $9.40, $5.50, $3.90; GIBOIR, $7.70, $5.10; DARBY DEAN, $4.40.

ALL SPADES was hustled to the front at once and under a vigorous ride maintained that advantage to the finish. GIBOIR broke with the winner, followed the pace, then weakened and just lasted to hold the place from the fast-closing DARBY DEAN. The latter broke well, was pulled up sharply and had to go round his field to finish fastest of all at the end.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:54. Off 3:56½. Winner, H. B. Anderson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOE D., $12.30, $6.10, $3.50; VERY BUSY, $7.40, $4.30; MAXINE, $3.50.

JOE D., quickest to begin, could not keep pace the first half mile, came to the outside rounding into the home stretch and won going away. VERY BUSY, prominent in the early running, saved ground on the rail and just lasted to stave off the closing rush of MAXINE. The latter dropped back the first half mile then closed with a rush on the outside and was the best of the others.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Medina. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:24. Off 4:26½. Winner, Dalia Stable's dk. b. h. (7), by Henry Lee—Vidente. Trained by J. Simon Healey. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12, 1:39 1-5, 1:42 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VITELIO, $9.60, $6.00, $4.50; JAMES A., $4.30, $3.20; JACK PATCHES, $3.00.

VITELIO, reserved off the pace down the backstretch, moved up with a rush rounding the turn for home and outgamed JAMES A. at the finish. JAMES A. went to the front rounding the first turn, opened up a wide margin on his field, but faltered slightly in the stretch drive. JACK PATCHES, well up in the early running, dropped back at the half-mile pole then came again in the run to the wire. LITTLE JOCK, breaking from the outside, took command for a quarter mile, gave way to JAMES A. down the backstretch, moved up menacingly on the stretch turn, but then weakened. SHINING SUN, in contention from the start, stopped suddenly at the quarter pole and was pulled up.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Carlovinian. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:55. Off 4:57. Winner, W. V. Dwyer's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCKY JEAN, $17.30, $7.40, $4.40; SAUNDERSTOWN, $5.70, $4.50; TOP TAX, $10.30.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:25. Off 5:26½. Winner, Corsicana Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PUNDIT, $6.80, $5.40, $4.30; BIT OF SORROW, $21.50, $10.00; STAR LOOM, $8.10.

PUNDIT, eased off the pace during the early running, saved ground on the rail down the backstretch, went to the outside on the stretch turn and fought it out courageously with BIT OF SORROW to gain a photo decision. The latter followed the pace of STAR LOOM till reaching the eighth pole, assumed a short lead and hung on gamely to the finish. STAR LOOM went to the front immediately, but was used up in setting the pace and weakened at the finish. NOTICE ME, prominent all during the running, had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:55. Off 5:56. Winner, H. E. Enger's b. f. Princess Baba, daughter of the White Rajah of Sarawak in Borneo, applies a "surf board" hold to her famous wrestler-husband, Bob Gregory, as Bob prepares for an appearance in New York tonight. A special box, decorated with the colors of her father's domain, has been set aside for the princess. The princess and Gregory will forsake the glitter of Manhattan tomorrow night to appear in Uncle Joe Turner's mat emporium, The Arena.

Florida Golfers Win.

At The Post . . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Selections at Tropical Park.

If this fellow, A. G. Tarn, walks up to you some day and asks, "What will you take for your horse?" the best thing to do is to turn away and then back to the office and nominate the horse for as many stakes as possible. Tarn put that question to Joseph E. Widener, president of the Hialeah Track, one day and Widener set a figure. Tarn took Rushaway shipped him to New Orleans and then shocked the turf world by making him grab off the Louisiana Derby. Just to rub it in, Tarn transferred Rushaway's activities to the Midwest and the "iron horse" won two derbies on consecutive days. Recently Tarn took a liking to the Belari Stud's Wise Fox. Would they sell him? Sure, and the price wasn't any too big. Tarn took Wise Fox and again headed for New Orleans with a new horse and again a cast-off collected first money in the Louisiana Derby. Now Tarn is going to point Wise Fox for the Kentucky Derby. If he can get away with the Churchill Downs classic horsemen probably will never sell him another horse. Of course, the Kentucky Derby is not a Louisiana Derby and Wise Fox will have to improve with leaps and bounds. He did just that before the trip to New Orleans and who knows but what he will lead Stagehand, Menow, Fighting Fox and the others to the wire the first Saturday in May. Less than 72 hours before they'll be off at Bowie. BILL.

First race—Cosmic Ray probably is the right one in the day's opening sprint for the platers. Balcony gets in with a lightweight assignment and should be prominent. Lady Bessie will be dangerous if she gets off the "also eligible" list.

Second race—

54 Fighters Set for Big Mitt Event

Pairings Late Because of Late Entries in Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., March 29.—The gong wil sound Thursday at 3 p. m. for the first of 22 preliminary bouts on the opening program of the three-day national collegiate boxing tournament at the University of Virginia.

Pairings for the entry list of 54 contestants, including a dozen college conference champions from all parts of the country were delayed until tomorrow by the late arrival of several national rules committee members. All boxers will assemble Thursday morning for medical examinations and weighing-in- ceremonies.

The preliminaries will be divided between Thursday afternoon and night, with 32 victors and seeded entries moving into the 16 semifinal bouts Friday night. The finals will begin Saturday night at 8 o'clock, starting time for all night bouts.

If all entries report the most crowded division will be the 115-pound class, in which six preliminary bouts will be necessary among the ten bantamweights. Included in this group is Ralph Miller, University of Idaho's Pacific Coast Conference champion.

The next most popular weight is the 165-pound class, which will have to go into five preliminary bouts for nine entries, including Rex Williams, South Carolina's Southern Conference champion, and J. L. Colson, Southeastern Conference light-heavyweight titlist from Louisiana State.

The 145-pound class offers the perfect bracket of four opening bouts for eight contenders for national honors, headed by Heston Daniel, Louisiana State's Southeastern Conference champion, and Maynard Harlow, University of Virginia welterweight star.

Although only two preliminaries will be required of the 125-pounders and the 155-pound entries, the weights are filled with talent for later tournament highlights. Ben Alperstein, last year's N. C. A. A. champion from the University of Maryland, has dropped to the 125-pound division. The 155-pound class has three sectional champions in Dees Youdall, California Aggies; Russell Dorn, Clemson, and Steve Wilkerson, Mississippi.

Five entries in the 135-pound class call for only one elimination bout. The light heavyweight division, in which Ray Schmidt, University of Virginia, is defending N. C. A. A. champion, is limited to four entries and no preliminary bouts.

Six heavyweights with almost perfect previous records will provide two of Thursday's preliminaries. These include Don Walker, San Jose College, 1938 Pacific Coast heavyweight champion; Leo Katalinas, Catholic University; Paul McDonald, Loyola; Ashby Dickerson, West Virginia; Ross Sundberg, University of Idaho, and Rene Trochesset, Louisiana State.

Local Fighters Off For Tourney Today

A half-dozen local collegiate clouters, two from Maryland and the rest from Catholic University, top off weeks of intensive training this afternoon with light workouts, and almost immediately head for Charlottesville, Va., scene of the annual National Intercollegiate Boxing championships.

An hour earlier Coach Eddie LaFond, of Catholic University, and his squad will depart by motor. Dave Bernstein, bantanweight; Fred Stant, middleweight; Jay Turner, light heavyweight, and Leo Katalinas, heavyweight, compromise the Cardinal contingent. Trainer George Lentz will accompany the group.

Both parties are confident of returning with a share of the laurels and their optimism does not appear to be unfounded. Alperstein, Southern Conference featherweight champion, has an excellent chance of adding the national crown to his rapidly expanding collection of trophies, while Dorr is conceded a good chance in his division.

Fredericksburg Cards 5 D. C. Nines

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 29.—A "power-house" schedule of 16 games, five of them with Washington, D. C. nines, has been arranged for the Fredericksburg High School baseball team.

For the first time since baseball became a major sport at the school, the team will not oppose a single Class B team.

The schedule: April 5, Western, here (tentative); April 8, Hargrave, here (tentative); April 14, Central, here; April 15, South River, N. J., here; April 19, McGuires Prep, there; April 22, Washington-Lee, there; April 26, Alexandria, here; April 28, Richmond Frosh, there; April 29, V. M. I. Freshmen, there; April 30, Hargrave, there (tentative); May 3, Eastern, there; May 10, Alexandria, there; May 13, Eastern, here; May 19, McGuire Prep, here; May 20, Washington-Lee, there; May 27, Central, there.

Nats Win, 13-4

Mel Almada had all but completed his count of the 79 fans in the stands in the fifth inning when Pitcher Mastynik interruped his reveries by picking Almada off second base.

The Nats returned to their base at Orlando tonight, but tomorrow they move over to Lakeland to battle the Tigers who have won two games from Harris' forces this spring.

If the Nats win no other honors this season, they can claim the American Association pennant. In five battles with A. A. clubs in the Grapefruit League, the Washingtons have triumphed five times. But they have won only one game in six with major league clubs.

Virginia U. Team Victor

Last-Minute Hit Nets 9 to 8 Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 29.—Bill Terry, son of the manager of the New York Giants, making his debut on Virginia's baseball nine, came to bat in the ninth inning today as a pinch hitter and crashed out a single, scoring Todd, which enabled the Cavaliers to turn back Vermont, 9 to 8.

The opening contest of the season proved a free hitting affair, a total of 25 hits being registerad.

Jimmy Sergeat led the attack for the Cavaliers with two circuit smashers, each time with a runner on base. Todd contributed a triple, and double and Pinder and Gillette a double apiece.

The Green Mountain lads threw quite a scare into the Virginia camp in their half of the ninth frame, when they pushed over a pair of tallies, to take the lead 8 to 7. It looked bad for Virginia when the first two batters up proved easy outs. Gillette singled to left field and raced home on Todd's slashing drive over the centerfielder's head, The stage was then set for Terry who nailed the second pitch over second base, sending Todd home with the winning run.

Maury Nee Paces Field

Willie Shea Is Second in Qualifying Play.

Adding a perfect 36 to 38 strokes he used on the outgoing 9, Maury Nee, of Columbia, yesterday paced candidates for Georgetown University's Golf Team over the first 18 of a 72-hole qualifying test at Congressional Country Club.

Nee's total was one better than the 75's posted by Willie Shea, District and Middle Atlantic champion; Billy Dettweiler, of the host club, and Frank Galvin. Johnny Burke, highly regarded Rhode Island star, was two strokes behind with 77.

Charley Pettijohn, New York State junior champion, disappointed with a 78, which enabled him to tie Bob Essler. Ray Higgins turned in a 79 card, and the usually reliable Harvey Johnson, who consistently breaks 75, soared to 80. All of the 16 candidates competing experienced putting difficulties because of top dressing applied to the greens earlier in the day.

The qualifying round will continue today and tomorrow with 18 holes each day, and the eight low men will be named for the team, which inaugurates an attractive schedule early in April.

D. C. Squash Titles At Stake April 4-9

The District of Columbia A. A. U. Squash Racquets Singles championships will be held April 4 to 9, inclusive, at the Central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G street northwest, Chairman Ralph W. Foster announced yesterday.

The event is open to all registered athletes in the D. C. A. A. U. or the Y. M. C. A. Gold and silver medals will be awarded the winner and runner-up, respectively, while a third-place bronze medal will be given the winner of the consolation round.

Y. M. C. A. registrations may be made with Mr. Foster, while D. C. A. A. U. entries may be made with E. Joseph Aronoff, at 230 C street northwest. The entry list closes Saturday April 2 at 2 p. m.

Wheat Again Follows Climb At Winnipeg

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 29.—Soaring of Winnipeg wheat quotations 5 cents a bushel, the utmost immediate limit allowed, helped to hoist the Chicago wheat market 1¾ cents maximum today. An additional stimulus was North American wheat export buying of more than 1,250,000 bushels, chiefly United States wheat.

Something of a setback, however, from the day's topmost prices here for wheat was caused by tumbles of securities and of commodities other than wheat. Winnipeg price skyrocketing was attributed to exhaustion of immediately available supplies of wheat in Canada.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1¼ cents above yesterday's finish; May, 87¼@87⅜; July, 83¼@83⅜. Corn ⅛ to ⅛ down. Oats unchanged to ¼ up. Rye ⅝ advanced. Provisions unchanged to 12 cents lower.

Cotton Losses Near $1 a Bale

New York, March 29 (AP).—Cotton lost 80 to 95 cents a bale today under foreign selling and liquidation promoted by weakness of the stock market. July sold off from 8.75 to 8.61 and closed at 8.62, with final prices 16 to 19 points net lower.

The market opened 2 to 5 points lower in response to declines at Liverpool and Bombay and under foreign offerings. Scattering liquidation most of the day easily supplied a limited trade demand. The offerings became more general in the last hour.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively.
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Break Sharply to New Lows; Bonds Decline; Commodities, Except Wheat, Drop.

New York, March 29.—The stock market presented a discouraging picture today, not only because of the severe early decline but also the failure of the morning rally to hold. A further break in bonds was given as the reason for declines in bank stocks to the lowest since 1933. Cotton and most other commodities were lower, wheat standing alone as a conspicuous exception with its advance of 1⅛ cents to 87⅜ cents a bushel. Dollars were lower in foreign exchange. Stock transactions totaled 1,720,000 shares.

The most severe phase of the decline in stocks developed in the first hour, a period which customarily reflects a composite of the country's over-night appraisal of important happenings. Manifestly, many minds reacted unfavorably, for the market had few friends in that hour when it needed them most.

Situations like this call attention to the stabilizing influence of the short account. After a prolonged decline such as the market has suffered lately, short covering ordinarily could be counted on to absorb a good part of the offerings, but that did not happen this time beeause the short interest is relatively small. Less than 400,000 shares changed hands during the first hour of declining prices, but demand was missing and prices dropped.

Steel Drops.

United States Steel broke 3⅜ points to a new low of 40½. Du Pont dipped 4⅜. American Smelting 2¾, Santa Fe 2⅝. Allied Chemical 3, Westinghouse Electric 3⅞, Anaconda 2, Bethlehem Steel 2½, Cerro de Pasco 2¾, Harvester 2⅞, Howe Sound 3¾, Detroit Edison 3½, Philip Morris 2, Texas Corporation 2½ and Union Pacific. Some of these stocks were at their lowest for three years. They did a little better toward the end of the first hour, but in the afternoon the whole list softened and dropped under early lows. Mining shares continued to reflect uneasiness over the Mexican situation, which is likely to affect all producers of silver whether they have properties in Mexico or not.

Margin selling may not have played an important part in the selling today, but those who have inquired into the last few waves of margin calling suspect that this factor may influence the market in a big way one of these days. Brokers have found customers willing to put up more money each time margins have thinned down to the danger point, but the average customer has done little more than tide over the situation temporarily. Today's decline may test whether they can do even as well as that again. Some traders are in a fair way to become involuntary investors.

Banking Position.

Member bank credit was liquidated on a large scale in the week of March 23, the weekly condition figures of banks in 101 cities reveal. Many of the changes reflected large shifts in this city incident to the tax date and Treasury financing, particularly the payment by the Treasury out of tax receipts of large amounts of maturing Treasury bills. Government direct obligations dropped $213,000,000, of which $152,000,000 was the decrease at New York City banks. Most of the remaining decrease occurred in Chicago. Loans went down $84,000,000. Of this $45,000,000 was the decrease in loans to brokers and others for carrying securities. The drop in commercial loans was $29,000,000, about half of the decrease being in this city. Government guaranteed securities went up $2,000,000 and other securities $63,000,000, the last item reflecting allotment to the banks here of New York State notes. The decline in aggregate bank credit was $232,000,000, which brought the total employed to the lowest since January, 1938. Deposits also were lower, domestic bank balances falling $203,000,000, demand deposits $34,000,000 and Government deposits $28,000,000. Time deposits rose $8,000,000 and foreign bank deposits $6,000,000.

U. S. Rubber.

That the proposed capital readjustments in United States Rubber Co. would be effected at the special stockholders' meeting Thursday was practically assured today when it became known that brokers would be allowed to give proxies for the preferred stock in "street names." The stock exchange expressed the opinion that giving of proxies for the preferred stock so held would not violate the new proxy rules in that the position of preferred stockholders would not be substantially changed. It requires approval of 75 per cent of both the common and preferred stockholders to authorize the proposed bond issue and other changes. The company has more than the number of common proxies required and has about 72 per cent of the preferred. Getting the few additional preferred proxies should follow without difficulty.

Silver.

Chapter Two in the silver story, begun yesterday with announcement of suspension of Treasury purchases from Mexico, occurred today when the Treasury lowered its bid another cent to the lowest figure since 1934 and the price in London slid 1¼ pence lower. Bids also were lowered for Mexican pesos, which in a single week have lost about 30 per cent of their former value. Today the silver bloc in Congress seemed a little more worried than it was yesterday. The silver bloc has lost much of its influence in recent years and has become quite isolationist-minded, meaning that it cares little what the world price is so long as domestic mines continue to be subsidized for new production.

Armco Earnings, Wages Set Peak

Middletown, Ohio, March 29.—New records for sales, employment, wages and earnings were established by the American Rolling Mill Co. and its subsidiaries in 1937, notwithstanding sharp reductions in the last few months of the year, according to the company's annual report to stockholders made public today.

Net income was $2,231,335, equal, after all charges, to $2.55 a share, which compares with net income of $6,441,677, or $2.73 an average share, in 1936. Sales in 1937 were $114,857,600, establishing a new record for the third consecutive year.

The number of employes increased from 16,536 at the end of 1936 to an all-time peak of 18,475 in July, 1937, but declined to 16,264 at the end of the year, with the majority of the employes working part time. Armco's wages were about 47 per cent above the wage rates in 1929.

Amerian Airlines, Inc.

Substantial progress was made by American Airlines, Inc., during the year 1937, according to the annual report filed today by C. R. Smith, president of the company. New records for passengers, mail and express traffic were established and the position of the company in the field of air transportation was materially improved.

Mr. Smith pointed out that although the company showed a net loss of $93,627 for 1937, payment of interest amounted to $227,342 and the provision for obsolescence and depreciation of equipment and property was $1,406,293. These figures compare with those of 1936, when the company showed a net profit of $4,589, paid $159,126 in interest and provided $1,277,629 for obsolescence and depreciation.

Government Buys Butter and Eggs

Chicago, March 29 (AP).—The Federal Government continued to make heavy purchases of butter and eggs in the Chicago and New York produce markets today. It was the second time eggs were bought in Chicago since the program was inaugurated.

Government agents bought 91,000 pounds of butter grading extras at 29 cents a pound in Chicago and 12,000 dozens of eggs grading fresh firsts at 17¼ cents a dozen. At New York they took 70,000 pounds of butter grading extras at 29¾ cents and 55,000 dozens of eggs.

Wholesale Junking Of Autos Proposed

Detroit, March 29 (AP).—Diversion of millions of worn-out automobiles from the highways to the junk piles was proposed today in two quarters connected with the automobile industry as a means to relieve a glutted used-car market and stimulate sales of new cars.

L. J. Epps, president of the Consumers Steel Products Corporation, of Detroit, sent letters throughout the industry, proposing creation of an automobile salvage corporation, which would buy used automobiles from dealers at prices not to exceed $100, and sell them to steel mills at scrap prices. He estimated 5,000,000 worn-out automobiles could be junked annually. A. N. Benson, general manager of the National Automobile Dealers Association, disclosed that a program for junking antiquated motor cars would be considered at the association's convention here April 25-27.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Baltimore, March 29.—Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended March 26 totaled 36,765. For the same week of last year the total was 54,514, while for the same week of 1930 the total was 63,673. During the previous week of this year total loads were 37,045.

16.7 Billions Loan Total of Insured Banks

Assets, Deposits and U. S. Holdings Decline During Year.

Loans and discounts of insured commercial banks were 5 per cent larger in amount on December 31, 1937, than a year ago, but were 2 per cent smaller in amount than on June 30, 1937, it was announced yesterday by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Outstanding loans of these banks totaled more than $16,700,000,000 on December 31, 1937.

The comparative statement of assets and liabilities of all insured commercial banks issued by the corporation also revealed the following significant changes during the year ended December 31, 1937.

Changes During Year.

1. Total assets amounted to $54,200,000,000, a decline of $2,000,000,000, or 3.5 per cent.
2. Holdings of United States Government obligations declined 7.5 per cent to about $13,669,000,000.
3. Holdings of State and municipal obligations declined by 6 per cent and of all other securities by 12 per cent.
4. Total deposits on December 31, 1937, amounted to $47,200,000,000, a decline of about $2,000,000,000, or 4 per cent, from the figure reported on December 31, 1936.
5. Interbank deposits declined by $1,100,000,000, or 13 per cent.
6. Demand deposits of individuals, partnerships and corporations declined by $1,300,000,000, or 6 per cent.
7. Savings and time deposits of individuals, partnerships and corporations increased by about 4 per cent.
8. Total capital funds of the banks increased slightly during the year, reflecting increases in surplus and undivided profits which more than offset retirements of preferred capital.

Associated Gas Files Under Holding Act

By the Associated Press.

Associated Gas & Electric Co., billion-dollar utility system, bowed today to the Supreme Court decision upholding the 1935 utility holding company law by registering with the securities commission.

Associated was the largest holdout from registration prior to yesterday's court decision upholding the right of Congress to force utility holding companies to register and filed detailed information with the commission. During the bitter controversy over the 1935 act, administration lawmakers charged that Associated spent millions of dollars in fighting the bill.

United Gas Improvement Co., of Philadelphia an $817,000,000 system, also registerad today.

General Electric Plans 10 Per Cent Pay Cut

New York, March 29 (AP).—Formal announcement is expected in a few days of a salary and wage cut by General Electric Co., amounting generally to 10 per cent with a $2,000 exemption. At the offices of the company today it was said the complete details of the pay reduction have not yet been worked out, but that the announcement would be made around April 1.

For those on monthly salary it was understood the reduction would become effective April 15, and on April 11 for those on weekly salary.

Bankers Find Rift in Gloomy Business Sky

No Upturn Yet, Says Guaranty Trust, but Greater Stability.

New York, March 29.—Two leading publications in the banking field today discerned encouraging omens in the general business situation. A review of business and financial conditions in the monthly survey of the Guaranty Trust Co. says, in part:

"Although no marked upturn in general business activity has yet occurred, some encouragement can be derived from the greater stability that has happened recently. The index of business activity of the Guaranty Trust Co. for February stands at a preliminary figure of 69.0, showing a decline of only 5 fractional points below the January level. This is the first time since last August that a sharp recession has not been reported."

Banking, official publication of the American Bankers Association, says:

"A report on the general business trend obtained through a national poll of bank directors and business executives shows some change for the better compared with a similar checkup last month.

"There are some good signs beginnnig to appear, but not enough to warrant much smiling. Among these might be mentioned the prospect of a more active capital market, although practically all securities being marketed at this time are for refunding purposes."

Stock Seat $55,000, Lowest in 20 Years

New York, March 29 (AP).—New York Stock Exchange memberships took a further downward skid in value today when arrangements were made for transfer of one at $55,000, the lowest since 1918. Financial circles heard memberships were being informally quoted in exchange circles late today at $52,000 bid, $65,000 asked.

The $55,000 sale represented a dip of $1,000 under a sale at $56,000 last Thursday, a price which was also the lowest since 1918, when memberships changed hands at $45,000. The all-time high for memberships was set in 1929, when one sold at $625,000.

Nickel No Longer Depends Upon War

Toronto, March 29 (AP).—A deliberate policy of divorcing the production of nickel from a reliance upon armament and war for prosperity has been undertaken by the International Nickel Co., its chairman and president, Robert G. Stanley, told shareholders at the annual meeting today.

"We did not desire to have the company's future rest upon the narrow base of a war material," he said. "In consequence, we have expended over the past 20 years approximately $18,750,000 in research, development and publicity to create peace-time uses for nickel. The consequence has been a planned and successful revolution in the character of our business."

Sinking Fund, commencing April 1, 1938, designed to retire approximately $600,000 principal amount of Bonds each six months, calculated to be sufficient to retire the entire issue by maturity.

Redeemable at Railway Company's option in whole or in part at any time upon at least 60 days' notice, or by Sinking Fund on any interest payment date upon at least 30 days' notice, at the following redemption prices: to and including October 1, 1947, 105%; thereafter, to and including October 1, 1952, 103½%; thereafter, to and including October 1, 1957, 102%; thereafter, to and including October 1, 1959, 101%; and thereafter 100%; in each case together with accrued interest.

In the opinion of Counsel, these Bonds are legal investments for Savings Banks in the States of New York, California, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

United States Steel Corporation states that it owns all of the capital stock and $28,000,000 principal amount of the total issue of $30,000,000 First Mortgage 3½% Bonds, due October 1, 1962, of Duluth, Missabe and Iron Range Railway Company. Subject to certain terms and conditions, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated has agreed to purchase said $28,000,000 principal amount of the Bonds from United States Steel Corporation at 96% and accrued interest.

Duluth, Missabe and Iron Range Railway Company has summarized as follows certain parts of its letter to United States Steel Corporation dated March 28, 1938, describing the issue. The entire letter and Exhibits thereto contained in the Offering Circular should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds.

THE RAILWAY COMPANY Duluth, Missabe and Iron Range Railway Company was formed July 1, 1937, under the laws of Minnesota, by consolidation of Duluth, Missabe and Northern Railway Company and Spirit Lake Transfer Railway Company. In March, 1938, the Railway Company acquired substantially all the properties of The Duluth and Iron Range Rail Road Company and Interstate Transfer Railway Company. The Railway Company, which is the largest carrier of iron ore in the United States, operates about 527 miles of road situated in the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, connecting the Mesabi and Vermilion iron ore ranges in northern Minnesota with ore docks owned by the Railway Company at Duluth and Two Harbors, Minnesota. During the past 10 years iron ore traffic constituted about 94% of total freight tonnage of the Railway Company and about 88% of its iron ore tonnage was shipped from mines owned or leased by subsidiaries of United States Steel Corporation.

THE ISSUE The entire $30,000,000 principal amount of Bonds were issued: $19,500,000 to acquire, through exchange, the entire capital stock of The Duluth and Iron Range Rail Road Company, $500,000 to acquire, through exchange, the entire capital stock of Interstate Transfer Railway Company, and $10,000,000 (which were sold at 100% and interest to United States Steel Corporation) to provide a portion of funds for (a) repayment of an advance used to pay at maturity, October 1, 1937, $8,151,000 of First Mortgage 5% Bonds of The Duluth and Iron Range Rail Road Company, (b) retirement prior to maturity of $1,000,000 First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds of Spirit Lake Transfer Railway Company, and (c) retirement prior to maturity of $1,000,000 First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Gold Bonds of Interstate Transfer Railway Company.

EARNINGS The following summary has been prepared by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Co. from the Consolidated Statement of Income of the Railway Company and its predecessors for the years 1928 to 1937, Exhibit C to the Railway Company's letter, and is subject to the notes forming an integral part thereof.

† After taxes, hire of equipment and joint facility rents, but before loss on retirements or sale of road and equipment.

* Annual interest charges on the entire funded debt now outstanding, consisting of $30,000,000 of these Bonds and $3,528,000 of equipment trust certificates, are $1,138,200, which figure represents substantially all of the present "fixed charges".

The volume of traffic of the Railway Company is largely dependent upon the activity of the steel industry which is subject to wide fluctuations. Steel production has declined drastically since the summer of 1937 and is now at a low level while stocks of iron ore on hand at furnaces and Lake Erie docks are high.

THE BONDS The Bonds, in the opinion of the Railway Company's Counsel, are secured (subject to taxes and assessments not yet due or being contested in good faith) by a first lien on all the physical property of the Railway Company except land grant land not used for railroad purposes, and on the Railway Company's equity in certain equipment leased under an equipment trust. Of the 527 miles of road operated, about 501 miles are owned, of which about 97 miles are held under deeds reserving certain rights. The First Mortgage, under which The First National Bank of the City of New York is Trustee, limits the principal amount of Bonds to $30,000,000. The mortgage lien as well as the provisions (with certain exceptions stated in the Offering Circular) of the First Mortgage may be modified by vote of holders of 66⅔% of outstanding Bonds.

The foregoing is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Circular dated March 30, 1938, and is subject to the more detailed statements therein. The entire Offering Circular should be read prior to any purchase of these Bonds. Copies of such Offering Circular may be obtained from the undersigned.

Price 98% and Accrued Interest

The Bonds are offered subject to prior sale and when, as and if accepted by Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated and subject to approval of its counsel, Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed. It is expected that delivery of Bonds in definitive form will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about April 1, 1938, against payment therefor in New York funds.

Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated is authorized in agreements with Sub-underwriters to purchase and sell Bonds, in the open market or otherwise, either for long or short account, for the respective accounts of itself and such Sub-underwriters, within the limits and during the period set forth in such agreements referred to in the Offering Circular.

$28,000,000 Ore Road Issue Offered Today

(Of an issue of $30,000,000 Duluth, Missabe and Iron Range Railway Co. first mortgage 3½ per cent bonds, $28,000,000 are offered to the public today by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. The bonds are dated October 1, 1937, mature in 25 years and are priced at 98 per cent and interest.

All the capital stock and $28,000,000 of the bonds of the railway company are owned by the United States Steel Corporation. The railway company, which is the largest carrier of iron ore in the United States, operates 527 miles of road in Minnesota and Wisconsin, connecting the Mesabi and Vermilion iron ore ranges in Northern Minnesota with the iron ore docks at Duluth and Two Docks.

Purposes of Issue.

The $30,000,000 bonds were issued for the following purposes: $19,500,000 to acquire through exchange the entire capital stock of the Duluth and Iron Range Railroad Co.; $500,000 to acquire through exchange the entire capital stock of Interstate Transfer Railway Co., and $10,000,000, which were sold at par to the United States Steel Corporation, to provide funds for the retirement of bond issues of the Duluth and Iron Range Railway Co., the Spirit Lake Transfer Railway Co. and the Interstate Transfer Railway Co.

A sinking fund, commencing April 1, this year, is designed to retire about $600,000 of the bonds every six months, which is calculated to retire the entire issue by maturity. The bonds are redeemable at the company's option as a whole or in part at any time upon 60 days' notice, or by sinking fund on any interest payment date upon 30 days' notice, at prices ranging from 105 until 1947, to par from 1959 to maturity, in each case with accrued interest.

Bob Burns Says—

It looks like the minute a person gets in the spot light, people start takin' shots at him and that's the reason why he should keep his record clean at home. It gives him a little sanctuary where he can get away from the cruel world that don't understand him.

I knew one actor out here whose conduct had started some terrible tales about him. One day he said to his wife: "Darling, all those things you hear about me on the street are lies. I hope you never do lie about me."

The wife says: "Well, as a matter fact, I do tell some little white lies about you once in a while. I think it's a wife's duty to speak well of her husband occasionally."

MEN OF CHINA!
YOU HAVE JUST RENOUNCED A LEADER WHO HAS PROVED HIMSELF A COWARD! THE DRAGON LADY SPEAKS TO YOU NOW!—GIVE EAR, THESE ARE IMPORTANT WORDS!...
...YOU WERE HELD TOGETHER AS BANDIT SOLDIERS BY KLANG—YOU PLUNDERED AND ROBBED BOTH SIDES ON THE FRINGE OF THE WAR .... BUT YOU DID THE GREATEST HARM TO YOUR OWN PEOPLE—WITH NO PROFIT TO YOURSELVES!..
...NOW THE MOST SELFISH KLANG NO LONGER GUIDES YOUR DESTINIES, AND UNLESS A COMPETENT LEADER HOLDS YOU TOGETHER YOU MAY SCATTER AS AUTUMN LEAVES IN THE WIND!—I, THE DRAGON LADY, BID YOU ACCLAIM ME YOUR MASTER!

JOE PALOOKA — The Mutineer. — By Ham Fisher

"OUI, MON COLONEL." PRETTY SCURVY LOOKING LOT.
THAT ONE WITH THE BLOND HAIR IS A FINE LOOKING SPECIMEN.
HE IS A MUTINEER! THE WORST OF THE LOT. TRIED TO ATTACK ME AND COMPLETELY DISRUPTED DISCIPLINE!
"MERCI, MON COLONEL." IT IS A GREAT HONOR YOU DO ME.
